C. F. Kettering for Breakfast.
Knudsen and Frederick.
Henry Ford's New 8 Cylinder.
A Church and 2 Mothers.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DETROIT, March 12.

SO MANY men and things to see in Detroit that it is hard to find even twenty minutes to write about it and get away to New York with Walter Chrysler on the "Detroiter" at seven in the evening.

BREAKFAST AT seven-thirty with Charles F. Kettering, chief engineer of General Motors, at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, recently taken over by Ralph Hitz, who affects hotels and their activity as a galvanic battery affects a sleepy toad.

The automobile business is only starting. Every important industry makes its greatest progress in the second twenty-five years of its existence. That is true of the telephone, with its great successes achieved in the last fifteen years, and true of electric light. It will prove true of the automobile industry, which is just starting its second twenty-five-year run.

A VISIT to William S. Knudsen, president of Chevrolet, in the General Motors Building. And a drive to his house in the country, later for a dinner at half past five.

YOU DISCUSS the new enormous tire for big and little cars that is being developed by Paul Litchfield, of Akron, and others. Only twelve pounds air pressure, no danger of blowout.

MR. KNUDSEN'S remedy for dissatisfaction is to let all talk and parade to their hearts' content.

KNUDSEN, BORN in Denmark, tells of old King Frederick the Seventh. When revolution was worrying Europe in 1848 and '49, the discontented marched toward Frederick's palace. The King heard they were coming, gave orders for all the guards to leave their posts and disappear. He was sitting in an arm chair with his gouty foot on a stool when the delegation of marchers came in. He asked:

"Hello, what do you fellows want?"

"We don't like your minister."

Said the king:

"Well, I dismissed him this morning. What else can I do for you?"

That ended it. There was no revolution in Denmark.

NEXT, A FAST run from Detroit to the Ford plant at Dearborn in a Hudson automobile, with a dictating machine built into the rear seat cushion. A letter dictated at fifty miles an hour gave a perfect record. You can use every minute in your car writing letters, or editorials or columns like this.

HENRY FORD is found in the south end of his laboratory. He assures you:

Somebody else tells you that he has been working recently from seven in the morning until late.

First, luncheon in the Ford dining room with Henry Ford, and Mr. Sorenson, who has plenty of driving power, Mr. Cameron, who thinks and writes, Mr. Cowling, general sales manager, who has just come back from flying above the fighting region in China, and R. C. "Babe" Meigs, so-called because he is six feet and a half tall.

He used to sell American steam engines and threshing machines in the Argentine. He and Henry Ford discussed every engine ever made, since the first one operated in the Serapion at Alexandria, before the birth of Christ. Mr. Ford hasn't got that one, but a sample of almost every other.

FOR LUNCHEON at least 10 kinds of bread, including one made of soy beans, and one stuffed with raisins from California. Mr. Ford tries everything. Three kinds of pie to choose from, all these the same as the workers have in a larger dining room.

Mr. Ford tells what he thinks about conditions and what the trouble is, in few words, but on some things he doesn't care to be quoted.

NEXT, AN examination, with Mr. Ford alone, of the new Ford models, the four and the eight-cylinder. Soon you will know all about them.

On a block with two mechanics supervising it like trained nurses watching a baby, one of the new eight-cylinder engines is running. Mr. Ford listens and says:

"I'll bet it's going over 2,500 revolutions."

That engine has been running night and day for a long time. By touching a lever Mr. Ford changes the tone of the engine. He has caused it to exert seventy horsepower.

NEAR THE big door leading from the laboratory, Mr. Ford says "Give me one of those," takes the wheel of one of his new eight-cylinder cars, and drives you down to see the new big Ford airplane.

On the way he takes you over a dirt road purposely made rough for experiment, says:

"I won't frighten you. I just want to show you."

And he runs you over that rough road of the rolling stones

Butler County Priest Among Those Recommended for Indictment in Case

BULLETIN.

BUTLER, Pa., March 12.—Eight persons were recommended for indictment on charges of embracery, two on charges of conspiracy to commit embracery, today in a special presentment of the Butler County grand jury that has been investigating an alleged plot to "fix" the Kline-Succop jury panel here. Four Pittsburghers are named in the presentment. A Butler County priest also was recommended for indictment.

Those recommended for indictment are: Howard Gross, alias Murphy, alias Williams, alias Wilson or Johnson, and the Rev. Father Francis Clifford, on charges of embracery; May Scott, alias May Daugherty; Bert Daugherty and William H. Cook, on charges of criminal conspiracy to commit embracery; May Scott, alias May Daugherty, embracery; Bert Daugherty, embracery; William H. Cook, embracery; Robert H. Cunningham and Roy C. Aiken, conspiracy; Robert H. Cunningham, embracery; Roy C. Aiken, embracery, and Lee Norris, embracery.

BUTLER, Pa., March 12.—The Kline-Succop trial postponed until May 2, Butler County's grand jury today was expected to put its finger on the reason for this latest delay in a presentment of its findings in a two-day probe of an alleged plot to "fix" the jury.

At least six, and probably seven true bills against alleged participants in the plot were expected. Four persons already are under arrest charged with embracery. They are Howard Gross, Pittsburgh city employe; R. J. Cunningham, Pittsburgh contractor; William H. Cook, of Hilliard, Butler County, and Roy Eakin, of Bakerstown.

Continuance of the case was ordered yesterday by Trial Judge Thomas D. Finletter, of Philadelphia, following a series of conferences with attorneys for both sides. It was expected that counsel for Mayor Charles H. Kline and his deposed Director of Supplies, Bertram L. Succop, would ask for the postponement, but this was unnecessary when Judge Finletter took the matter into judicial hands.

County Commissioner Slips On Ice at Country Home; Family Rushes to Bedside

After an X-ray examination, McGovern was taken to the operating room, and placed under an anesthetic while Dr. C. K. Shanor and Dr. E. S. Henry, set the broken bones.

Physicians said that the broken ankle probably would be in a cast for six weeks, but that he would be able to be about on crutches in a few weeks.

CO-EDS ESCAPE FLAMES

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., March 12.—(AP.)—Chi Omega Sorority House at Westminster College was destroyed by fire today. Three co-eds escaped, lightly clad.

Twenty-one other girls were quartered in the building, but they had left for early classes. Those who were in the house are Virginia Welsh, of Homestead; Ruth Wagner, of Sharon, and Sara Ellwood, of Crafton.

The flames were discovered by Miss Welsh when she arose from bed. She aroused the others.

The fire started from an overheated furnace. The house, a 14-room frame structure, was owned by Mrs. Sara Prather, of New Wilmington. It was leased to the college. The loss was estimated at about $10,000.

Artist Frustrates Kidnaping of Son, 3

RIVERTON, N. J., March 11.—(Universal.)—An attempt to kidnap the 3-year-old son of Claude J. K. Anderson, wealthy artist, from his colonial mansion here, was frustrated by the father today. Riverton is about 30 miles from the home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Awakened at 1:30 a. m. by a noise, Anderson rushed to the nursery and collided in the dark with a man who had just lifted the baby from his crib. The impact sent both men to the floor and the kidnaper fled.

Catholic Prelate Kidnaped in Mexico

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, March 12.—(AP.)—Bishop Nicolas Corona, Catholic prelate of Papantla, who had been living in Teziutlan, State of Puebla, since religious difficulties forced him from the State of Vera Cruz, was kidnaped last night.

CHINESE RENEW SMASH AT FOE

By DIXON HOSTE,
International News Service.

SHANGHAI, March 12.—While armistice negotiations were held in abeyance Chinese and Japanese forces came to blows again today, and both sides strengthened their lines.

A Japanese communique revealed that the opposing armies fought a brisk battle five miles northwest of Kiating. It stated that the Chinese opened an offensive which was successfully repulsed with heavy losses.

MOSCOW, March 12.—(INS.)—Civil warfare along the Siberian-Manchurian border, in which Chinese were said to have fired into the Siberian city of Blagoveshchensky, today was expected to result in a formal Soviet protest to the new independent Manchuian government.

Ten garrison officers and three civilians were said to have been slain, including two Japanese.

Sleuths Rush To Capture Fugitive

Noel Coward Back From Inca Region

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—(AP.)—Noel Coward, the playwright, arrived yesterday aboard the Norwegian freight motorship Toronto from Panama and will remain here a week before going to New York.

He is on his way home to England, after a trip up the Alta Parana, tributary of the Amazon River, and a visit to the Inca remains at Cuzco, Peru.

3 Homes Guarded On Madman's Threat

PHILADELPHIA, March 12.—(AP.)—Three homes and a store were guarded today against the threat of a madman, escaped from the State Hospital at Norristown, to "get even" with the persons who testified against him. The escaped man is Isadore Gorman, 44, committed after he shot and seriously wounded his former employer, Israel Lesse, 36, in 1930.

Nerve Gone, Powers Ready To Talk in Death Cell

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., March 12.—(AP.)—Counsel for Harry F. Powers said today that the condemned man would issue a statement late this afternoon from the death house where he awaits hanging for the killing of Mrs. Dorothy Pressler Lemke, of Northboro, Mass.

Attorney J. Ed Law would not intimate what the statement will contain. The attorney conferred with his client last night.

Powers is under sentence to die at 9 p. m. next Friday.

With trembling hands Powers pushed aside his meal last night, and wringing his chubby hands, paced back and forth in his double-screened cell, mumbling to himself. Gone is the steel nerve that served him so well as he looked upon the bodies of two women and three children recovered from a ditch near his fantastic "garage" in Quiet Dell.

The dandy of the hills, who conducted a matrimonial agency through which he lured his victims to their death, cringes in the semi-darkness of his cell as he waits—for the end.

MELLON BANK NAMED IN CASE

An agreement whereby the Mellon National Bank would take over the affairs of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., prior to the closing of the latter on September 21, 1931, was canceled, she was informed and believes, through the exercise of pressure by an individual associated with the bank, it is charged by Mrs. Zeffie M. Eggers, of Shady drive, east, Mt. Lebanon, a stockholder in the closed bank.

The allegation was made in an affidavit of defense Mrs. Eggers filed yesterday in federal court to an action brought against her by C. O. Thomas, receiver of the bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., to recover $300 as assessments of six $50 shares of capital stock she held in the bank.

Mrs. Eggers is the wife of L. G. Eggers, of the firm of Eggers and

GANGLAND ATTORNEY EXPECTED TO MEET COLONEL'S AIDES

International News Service.

Contact with the kidnapers may be established at an extraordinary meeting here today between a lawyer representing Detroit gangsters, the chief advisers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and probably a representative of Police Commissioner Mulrooney.

It was not learned whether Lindbergh himself would attend the reported conference.

However, Col. Henry Breckinridge, his counsel and friend, early today left the Lindbergh home at Hopewell, N. J., from which the infant was kidnaped nearly 11 days ago to come to New York for the conference.

INDEPENDENT OF POLICE

The meeting, it was reported, was arranged independent of the police activities in the hunt for the kidnapers. It was described as an outgrowth of Lindbergh's own efforts to establish communication with the kidnapers and his pledge of immunity to them if they returned his 20-month-old son.

Who the Detroit gangsters or their affiliations are was not revealed.

LINDY'S MOTHER MENTIONED

Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, two men said to have powerful underworld contacts, who were named by Lindbergh to act as "go-betweens" with the kidnapers, planned to pursue the hunt for the child to Detroit as soon as a rum trial in which they appeared today was ended.

Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, mother of the flier, a few days ago was reported to have received a message from either the kidnapers or pretended kidnapers in her Detroit home.

Col. Breckinridge was known to have gone on numerous secret missions in the past week in the efforts to establish some contact with the kidnapers.

Today's meeting may be the culmination of these attempts. Despite denial by police, Col. Lindbergh was generally believed to have heard directly from the abductors on several occasions, either by letter or telephone.

LINDY HOME LIGHTED

For several days rumors penetrated to correspondents at Hopewell, N. J., that Detroit gangsters either were implicated in the kidnaping or possessed definite knowledge of the child stealers.

At Hopewell, N. J., the Lind-

NEW MYSTERY GIRL IN HUNT

NEW YORK, March 12.—A new mystery woman entered the Lindbergh kidnaping case today. She is Dorothy Thompson, a supposed friend of Henry Johnson, suitor of Betty Gow, Junior Lindbergh's nurse. It is hinted that the mysterious Dorothy was Betty's rival for Johnson's affections.

Meanwhile, New Jersey state police announced that Betty Gow was not under any form of restraint or detention.

Newark police who questioned Miss Thompson and were reported to have learned of several trips she took with Johnson were evasive when questioned about this development. One official said:

"She is a guest of the city of Newark and will remain a guest of the city until all the information she has regarding Henry Johnson is obtained.

Johnson, now detained in Newark, charged with illegal entry into the country, took her to two roadhouses and on other social trips, Miss Thompson was reported to have informed Deputy Police Chief Brex, Newark.

He refused to discuss her testimony, however, explaining:

Anne Still Active Despite Her Grief

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 12.—(AP.)—Mrs. Lindbergh, worn but still standing up to the blow, today went about her household duties and took her meals on the second floor of the house with her mother, Mrs. Dwight Morrow. The Colonel, active as ever, was seen about the place wearing his gray cap and suit.

'Slow Down,' Walker Warned by Doctor

NEW YORK, March 12.—(AP.)—Mayor James J. Walker, after collapsing while being examined at Rockefeller Institute yesterday, was warned by his personal physician that he must slacken the pace or risk serious danger to his health.

Lindy Heard Kidnapers But Laid Noise to Wind

By DOROTHY ROE
Universal Service.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 12.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh heard the kidnapers of his baby son on the night when they entered his nursery window, but he paid no heed to the strange noises in the house that night, attributing them to the wind which whistled about the lonely white house on the hill.

This was revealed today by Assistant Police Chief Charles E. Williamson, the first official to arrive at the Lindbergh home after the kidnaping. He said that Col. Lindbergh told him he had heard a noise at about the time the kidnapers are thought to have entered the house.

But the men who stole the first baby of the land had timed their visit well. They chose a night when the wind was banging the shutters, and there were wierd poppings and crackings of the trees in the Sourland Mountains.

They knew that an accustomed noise, the sound of a creaking board, would attract no attention on such a night. Williamson said:

"I believe that the baby is within 15 miles of the Lindbergh home."

There were signs of unusual excitement and activity. More than 20 automobiles, most of them believed filled with state troopers passed in and out of the grounds.

Another dramatic turn was given today to the baby hunt, already crowded with extraordinary developments.

NATION-WIDE APPEAL

Police throughout the nation were requested by New Jersey authorities to give information of the whereabouts of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., no matter from what source obtained on an official pledge any clue will be treated confidentially.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of the New Jersey state police, made the appeal. A police circular, he said, to be printed in Washington and containing the call for aid, will be distributed immediately.

Coming at the end of more than 10 days' fruitless search for the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, the action was interpreted as giving official support to Lindbergh's own pledge of immunity to the kidnapers if they returned the child.

But although the call seemed to imply neither the police nor the Lindberghs' own broadcast appeals to the kidnapers to return the world's most famous baby had yielded any results, there were a number of major developments besides the scheduled meeting today which stirred hope the trail of the kidnapers may finally be uncovered.

PRISONER GRILLED

Among these were:

1—At the personal request of Col. Lindbergh, a prisoner from the Tombs here was taken in great secrecy and under heavy guard to Hopewell, N. J., to the isolated Lindbergh home from where the child was abducted on the night of March 1.

2—From Newark, N. J., came reports that a woman of mystery, Dorothy Thompson, supposed friend of Henry Johnson, the "voluntary prisoner" in the case, had been brought from New York for questioning about Johnson's activities.

A—Max Silverman, Newark, head of a bonding agency, announced a plane was in readiness to take him to Chicago at a moment's notice to bail out "Scarface" Al Capone, should the racketeer king's offer to hunt for the baby, if released from federal jail, be accepted. Silverman said he had $200,000 cash ready for the purpose.

SECRECY PROMISED

He said:

"The identity of all people disclosing information leading to the recovery of the baby will be treated with confidence.

"This guarantee of confidence repeated in the circular and will adhere strictly to it."

Since the recovery of the baby is now the first aim of the gigantic kidnap chase, it was believed the statement would encourage the kidnapers to make overtures for the restoration of the child for ransom and an assurance of immunity.

Great mystery surrounded the identity of the Tombs prisoner who was injected into the case.

IDENTITY SHIELDED

Morris Rosner, variously known as a former secret investigator for Washington officials, a power in the underworld, and now out on bail in connection with a stock fraud case, called to question the inmate.

He went, it was reported, as Col. Lindbergh's personal agent. Rosner was said to have been active in the case for some days at Lindbergh's request.

Commissioner of Correction Patterson refused to comment on a rumor the prisoner was a former private detective agency operative.

He refused to affirm or deny that he was suspected of being of a quintet of men who planned the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby as long ago as last fall.

Police were said to be making an attempt to find another one of the five believed to be in prison in another city. Patterson declared:

HOOVER AWAITS CAPONE PLAN

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Al Capone will be asked to inform the government at once what plan he may have in mind to search for the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The gangster's unique proposal that he be given freedom on bail to aid in the nation-wide hunt was discussed informally by President Hoover and his cabinet yesterday.

Capone's proposal was not taken seriously and it was agreed that unless he will make known some definite plan no more attention will be paid to him.

An answer from Capone is expected today.

Attorney General Mitchell said after discussing the matter with the President:

"As yet we have no proposition before us officially. Capone and his affairs are at present outside our jurisdiction. The court would have to decide upon it."

The Circuit Court has previously rejected Capone's plea for release under bond pending his appeal from the 11-year sentence and as yet Capone's lawyers have not appealed this phase of the case to the United States Supreme Court.

Spitale Lawyer Sees Lindy Mystery End

CLARE, Mich., March 12.—(AP.)—Isaiah Leebove, New York lawyer, who says he is counsel for Salvatore Spitale and Irving Bitz, said here last night he does not know whether the kidnaped Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., is safe or not, but believes the case will "come to a head very, very soon."

He denied knowledge of what ransom has been asked or where the baby is hidden. He said he had been in communication with his clients in New York, the "go-tweens" named by Col. Lindbergh.

Kidnaped, Man Says After 20-Day Absence

HAGERSTOWN, Md., March 12.—(AP.)—After an absence of 20 days, John Murray reported to police he had been kidnaped for what he believed was revenge for his reporting the names of several men to the Martinsburg (W. Va.) police as having stolen an automobile. He said he was left in a railroad box car until he reached Lebanon, Mo.

Seek Ford's Appearance In Fatal Riot Suits

DETROIT, March 11.—(AP.)—Plans to get Henry Ford into court in connection with suits to be filed in connection with Monday's fatal riot at the Ford Motor Company's plant in Dearborn were revealed yesterday by Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Baldwin, in Detroit to prepare damage suits based on the slaying of four men and the wounding of scores of others in the riot, revealed his plans to Mayor Frank Murphy.

The legal proceedings, Baldwin said, will be based on an attack on the constitutionality of the Michigan law which provides for charges against persons who kill officers during riots but does not contain a ground for action against officers who may kill rioters.

Baldwin said Detroit police were not in any way to blame for the rioting at the Ford factory, but criticized Henry Ford and the Dearborn police for the riot.

Five thousand persons packed the Arena Gardens last night for a meeting avowedly sponsored by Communists and heard speakers demand "the trial and conviction of Henry Ford for countenancing the murder of our comrades."

Other speakers, none of whom was identified, urged the "immediate election" of Frank Murphy as Mayor and establishment of a Soviet government in the United States.

GIRL KILLED, 3 HURT IN CRASH

Miss Virginia O'Brien, 25, of 98 Sampson street, Ingram, died early today in the Allegheny General Hospital from injuries suffered late yesterday when a Ward Baking Company truck was hurled against the Bridgeville station platform of the Pennsylvania Railroad by a local passenger train.

Miss O'Brien was struck while she was standing on the station platform. Miss Edna Sumney, 28, of 800 Highland avenue, Carnegie, Miss O'Brien's companion, was also taken to the hospital, as was Harry T. Cook, driver of the truck. The women were employed by Universal Steel Company. Walter Petrick, of Bridgeville, a mail carrier and night student at the University of Pittsburgh, who was also on the platform, was injured.

2 MORE BANKS TO PAY HERE

The Pennsylvania Bank and Trust Company and the Garfield Bank, both of Pittsburgh, are two of the five closed Pennsylvania banks which will figure in disbursements to depositors aggregating nearly $1,000,000, it was learned today.

It was also learned that checks have been mailed to depositors of the closed Merchants Savings and Trust Company, 1410 Fifth avenue, in advance payment of 20 per cent of net deposit liabilities. The payment totaled $136,507 and was distributed among 3,051 depositors.

The Pennsylvania Bank and Trust will pay 10 per cent, or $256,657 to 7,600 accounts.

The Garfield Bank will pay $93,965, or 25 per cent to 7,600 accounts.

KIDNAP SEARCH NOW ACTIVE IN THREE STATES

N. J. State Police Say Pledge of Confidence Does Not Guarantee Immunity

By QUENTIN REYNOLDS
International News Service.

TRENTON, N. J., March 12.—In a formal statement this morning Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said the state police were now running down clues in "at least three states," but none has shed any further light on the Lindbergh baby kidnaping. He said:

"The results of these investigations are not known and will not be until the investigators communicate or return."

In his statement Col. Schwarzkopf said that the state police guarantee of confidence to all persons wishing to furnish information about the kidnaping did not carry with it a guarantee of immunity to the kidnapers. He said:

"The matter of immunity is beyond our control."

CO-OPERATION IS PLEDGED

Col. Schwarzkof's statement follows:

"Respecting requests from the press and in wishing to cooperate with the press, three instead of two bulletins will be issued daily. The time for these bulletins will be 2 p. m., 4 p. m. and 10 p. m. In a further desire to co-operate with the press and at the same time satisfy the public we will be glad to receive one hour before the time of publication of bulletins suggestions as to news to be covered and questions from the press.

"Both of these will be considered in preparation of the bulletins and will be covered as far as possible in the bulletins by the information it contains.

"The stated policy as to information to be given out will continue and we request your co-operation in not making suggestions contrary to defined policy.

CHIEF CONSIDERATION

"It must be remembered that the first consideration in the case at this time is to accomplish the return of the baby.

"We earnestly hope that this bulletin and the response to your suggestions and questions will satisfy the press, and our statement Thursday night was offered in the same spirit of attempting to arrive at a solution which would meet with every one's approval.

"Thursday night a statement was issued concerning Betty Gow and Henry Johnson. In this statement we tried to thoroughly define the positions in which both these individuals are at present.

"While Johnson is being detained by the Newark police department, Betty Gow is not under any form of detention or restraint. No request was made from these headquarters as to bail for Johnson and it is not known what action the Newark authorities may have taken in this direction.

"The police have not had any communication with the kidnapers or with any of their representatives."

CLOSING CAUSE SEEN

In her affidavit of defense the defendant says she is informed and believes that the failure of the Comptroller of Currency to bring about the performance of the contract of the Mellon National Bank was the direct and immediate cause of the closing of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., and that his acts in relation thereto estop him from now making an assessment against the stockholders.

The affidavit sets forth that the Comptroller and receiver are each under bond for faithful performance of their duties, and that the losses complained of as a basis for the suit are direct and natural consequences of the non-performance of their duties, and this and other suits are instigated solely for relieving those officials from their own liability.

LOSSES CHARGED

The defendant avers in her affidavit that she learned since September 21, 1931, that there had been large losses to the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., over a period of years; that these losses resulted from negligence and mismanagement of the bank's officers, and that the conditions were known to the Comptroller as a result of examinations made twice a year as provided by law.

The affidavit further avers the defendant is informed and believes that the conduct of a former officer of the closed bank in the matter of the estate of John G. McCaskey was sufficiently public as to come to the attention of the Comptroller, as well as the conduct of the affairs of the bank and the officers' interest in the affairs of the Standard Plate Glass Company, of Butler, Pa.

The affidavit avers, on information and belief, that in spite of the fact that an agreement had been made by the Mellon National Bank to take over the affairs of the Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., no effort was made at the time or since the appointment of the receiver by the Comptroller, to enforce the alleged agreement. The defense also alleges, on information and belief, that after the closing of the bank the good will and accounts were immediately solicited by the Mellon National Bank, and many of them were obtained without the investment of any money by the Mellon National Bank. The affidavit states that all its allegations are based upon information received by the defendant and are believed to be true or susceptible of proof.

Two Stars From Here At Columbia Get Novel Jobs

Two Pittsburgh district athletes and students at Columbia University have joined the ranks of student-bodyguards for wealthy children in New York, demand for which has appreciably increased since the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

They are Clifford Montgomery, of Natrona, and John Balquist, of Pittsburgh, captains of football and baseball respectively for the coming season at Columbia.

Both of these young men, like scores of others in eastern colleges, have taken jobs as part-time "nurses" to children of wealthy residents of the exclusive sections of New York.

"Both Montgomery and Balquist have earned money giving small boys the time of their lives. Why, the kids look up to those two fellows as their idols, and their words are law. Having your hero for a playmate and a tutor is a thrill that makes life worth living for lots of our neighborhood youngsters."

The athletes spend three or four hours a day with the children in their care, calling for them at school, romping in the parks and helping them in their home work.

No requests have been made for similar duty at the three Pittsburgh universities, a check revealed yesterday.

JURY FINDING IN 'FIX' PROBE AWAITED

Judge Finlette Postpones Mayor's Trial to May 2; Sees Danger of 'Bias'

facts of this case. Of course, no District Attorney could avoid a grand jury investigation under such circumstances. But I cannot see how—as fair-minded as the members of this jury panel might be—they could put aside any bias in their minds. I cannot see how any juror who has gone through this grand jury probe could render a fair and impartial verdict in this case."

Judge Finletter's orders for continuance came rather unexpectedly despite earlier indications that such a course was inevitable. It was considered likely that the Philadelphia jurist before taking any action would review the grand jury's presentment and it was thought he might not act until a motion had been made by either side.

JUDGE ACTS QUICKLY

Taking his seat upon the bench with Judge Thomas W. Watson, of Butler County, he formally declared court in session himself in the absence of a court crier due to the lateness of the hour. He launched immediately into his views and declared he would not wait for a motion to be presented. Rather, he said, he would order the continuance unless he heard a motion to the contrary.

Neither side objected, former Judge M. Galbreath, one of Kline's counsel, rose to sustain the judge's remarks declaring:

"We feel on the part of the defense that under present circumstance and with the atmosphere that has been created by things that have been charged here and are in process of investigation, the defendants in this case should not be called upon to stand trial at this time."

District Attorney Edgar H. Negley, who had just emerged from the grand jury room, demurred. He said that out of the 75 members of the Kline panel there were 66 men and women who, he felt positive, could render a fair and impartial verdict.

REJECTS FULL PANEL

Judge Finletter thought otherwise. He said:

"I do not see how any juror who has been subjected to a proper examination in this investigation could enter the jury box with a fair and unbiased mind when he has had drummed into his ears an accusation of a much more serious crime against these very men whom he is expected to try next week.

"The psychology of it is that he is biased."

Addressing himself to his fellow jurist, he declared:

"I do not think, Judge Watson, that 12 men could be selected from this body of 66 persons."

Allegheny County's District Attorney, Andrew T. Park, rose to state that the prosecution had no objection and Attorney Charles G. Prichard, chief counsel for Kline, stated likewise. The date fixed, Attorney Galbreath rose with a motion that a new panel of jurors be drawn and Judge Watson announced he would see to that at a later date.

Judge Finletter left Butler for Pittsburgh shortly after ordering the continuance. Attorneys Prichard, Edward Coll and E. L. Kearns, associates, returned to Pittsburgh also. District Attorney Park and his first assistant, George F. P. Langfitt, remained here for dinner and a short conference with Butler's District Attorney.

THE BIG airplane, its monoplane of metal spreading more than half the length of a New York city block, is a giant to satisfy any imagination, and it will carry forty passengers. The British recently finished their biggest plane to carry thirty-eight passengers from London to South Africa.

Three Hispano engines will run this air giant, which can draw in its landing legs and wheels to prevent air resistance.

Two engines built into the wing on each side of the fuselage are of 650 horsepower each. On top, towering above the plane, is an 18-cylinder engine of 1,150 horsepower; fastened throughout every part of the structure as the roots of a tree fasten it to the ground.

The rear end of the engine tapers to a sharp point, to let the wind slip away. That idea is borrowed from a falling rain drop, which, according to German scientists, offers the minimum on resistance to the air, being big at the falling end, pointed at the upper end.

HENRY FORD talks as little about his new cars as a well-trained husband and father who has been told by his wife:

"Please don't talk about the children."

All he says is:

"There they are, look at them."

He is particularly interested in a tiny engine made for his factories in England and the cars to be built there.

British automobile taxes are unlike ours. The smaller the engine the less you pay.

This engine is about the size of a stovepipe hat, had a "bore" no bigger than a baby's wrist, develops 20 horsepower and will drive a car 58 miles an hour.

THE NEW car whirls you to the Ford Museum, with its many buildings, including a reproduction of Independence Hall in Philadelphia and the Edison laboratory in which the electric light bulb was perfected more than 50 years ago. The laboratory and all the machinery were removed from Orange, N. J. Mr. Jehl, who worked there with Edison 53 years ago, explains things.

THERE IS the small brick school house that Henry Ford attended when he was a boy, and the railroad station that used to stand at Smith's Creek. Ford was put out of it for setting fire to something. Don't be discouraged if your boy is mischievous. There is a little old tin-type photograph gallery that takes your picture with your head resting classically on your thumb and forefinger, an iron claw at the back of your head.

And there is the beautiful white church made of bricks that were in the house where Mr. Ford's wife was born, the house in which they married.

EVERY MORNING boys from the Ford school conduct their own services in this church.

Detroit is an interesting city, and Henry Ford is an interesting man. The ice will bear on the lake near his laboratory and he is going skating.

PASSAGE SEEN IN SESSION MONDAY

City Lawmakers 6 to 1 For Primary Decision, With McArdle Opposed

Approval by City Council to the placing of $5,000,000 in relief bond issues on the ballots at the April 26 primaries is forecast as the result of the six-to-one affirmative vote in Finance Committee yesterday.

The two bills, one providing for submission to the voters of a $3,000,000 bond issue for providing food, clothing and shelter to needy families, and the other submitting a $2,000,000 bond issue to provide employment, will be up in Council for final passage Monday.

Councilman P. J. McArdle voted "no" on the bond issues. Councilman Robert Garland and Charles Anderson were absent. McArdle declined to comment on his stand other than to say that he would speak on it Monday.

Leaders of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, who have asked for the vote on the bond issues and members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board who have opposed them, were present at the hearing but added nothing to their previous arguments.

The motion to approve the bills was made by W. Y. English, chariman of the Finance Committee, who said:

"Unless a subject is utterly ridiculous, no one should object to putting it up to a vote of the people."

The organization of the new "family-help-a-family" campaign led by Senator Frank J. Harris will be patterned on military lines with the territory divided and thoroughly canvassed by organized battalions. Roy A. McGregor, of the Lakewood Engineering Company, has been appointed chief-of-staff.

The campaign organization will be completed before any subscriptions will be taken, according to Senator Harris. It is believed the active campaign will be started around April 4.

State Relief Decision Expected After Hearing

An early decision on the constitutionality of the Talbot act, providing $10,000,000 for unemployment relief in the state, is anticipated by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, which convened here in special session yesterday to hear arguments. Chief Justice Frazer said after the hearing:

"It is a case of great importance and we desired to be fully informed."

Former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper argued for the constitutionality of the act, emphasizing the two points which members of the court indicated were paramount, that the act was embraced in the subjects designated by Gov. Gifford Pinchot in his call for the special session and that the appropriation did not constitute a debt of the state.

Pepper disputed the question advanced by Attorney General William A. Schnader of the right of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to share in the fund because poor boards were abolished in their municipal boundaries. Pepper argued that poor boards merged in welfare departments.

LOS ANGELES, March 12.—(AP.)—Terming them "flagrant law violators," Municipal Judge Clement Nye sentenced Mary Nolan, screen actress, and her husband, Wallace T. Macrery, to serve 30 days each in jail on a wage claim charge.

Miss Nolan, formerly known to the New York stage as Imogene Wilson, and Macrery gave notice of appeal and were released under bonds of $200 each.

They were charged with failure to pay wages to 13 employes of Miss Nolan's fashionable Hollywood gown shop and were convicted Wednesday on eight counts.

The 30-day sentences were imposed yesterday for the specific offense of failing to pay Leon Nelson, tailor, $61 in wages. They were given suspended sentences totaling 630 days each on the seven other charges.

Miss Nolan said as she left the court room she intended to withdraw her bankruptcy proceedings in New York and pay all claims against her. She has contracts to make several motion pictures, she said.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 12.—(AP.)—Anthony W. Bell, Uniontown, Pa., confessed extortionist who told Buffalo police last month that he aided in the slaying of John F. Donohue, reputed Pennsylvania racketeer, was sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge John Knight to three years in the Federal Reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio.

Bell pleaded guilty to trying to extort $100 from the proprietor of an East Side confectionery two months ago. Edward Masker, alias Theodore Dawson, arraigned with Bell before Judge Knight, pleaded not guilty. The latter's trial will be moved later.

A short time after Bell had been arrested in connection with the attempted extortion of money from Mrs. Caroline Ptaszek, Buffalo, he confessed his part in the slaying of Donohue, alleged to have been a collector for a political ring in Fayette County, Pennsylvania. Bell had been previously acquitted of the murder charge by a Fayette County jury.

Gust Kutras, 40, his wife and five small children, trapped on the second floor of their home, were carried down ladders to safety by Stowe Township firemen when flames from an overheated furnace partly destroyed their home in Highway road, Stowe Township, early today.

Helen, 12, asleep in a bedroom with Katherine, 13 and Sophia, 10, her sisters, awakened her father and mother who were asleep in another second floor bedroom with two other children, John, 4, and George, 6.

The family fought their way through the smoke to a second floor porch roof in the rear of the nine room brick structure. From the roof they were carried by Stowe township firemen who had been summoned by Capt. Nick DeAngelo, of the the township fire department, a neighbor. FREED MOTHER WILL CLING TO HOME

Mrs. Culbertson Returns to Scene of Killing and Seeks Comfort in Her Two Boys

Back at her home in Mission Hills, fashionable section of Mt. Lebanon, Mrs. Laverna M. Culbertson, 35, today sought to forget the momentous and tragic events of the past four months that saw her tried and acquitted of the murder of her husband, Albert, 37, during a week-end party November 15.

Surrounded by her sons, Albert and Charles, Mrs. Culbertson said:

"I want to forget it all. It's been a terrible ordeal and I want to forget."

Neighbors greeted Mrs. Culbertson as she started to walk across the snow-covered lawn to her home.

STICKS TO HOME

Once inside the house, the scene of the tragic party in celebration of the Pitt-Army football game, the widow started mothering her two fatherless sons. Sending them upstairs to prepare for dinner with friends, Mrs. Culbertson said:

"I have no plans for the future. We shall continue living here. It is home. Both boys are in school in Mt. Lebanon and I want them to continue their studies."

Neither, she said, has expressed any definite ideas as to what they hope to be. She added:

"Junior, however, has said he wants to be a doctor, a lawyer or an engineer like his father."

THINKS SHE HAS AGED

Recalling the ordeal through which she had just passed, Mrs. Culbertson sighed:

"I'm tired. I feel I've aged a thousand years."

She was a mother again when the boys came rushing down the stairs to her for inspection. Smiling at Charles, she said:

"Turn around! Just as I thought—you have combed only the front part of your head."

Mild Weather Bars Gorge in Allegheny

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 12.—Danger of an ice gorge in the Allegheny River this year is remote. Moderating temperatures on the heels of zero weather have resulted in widening the channel in the last 36 hours. A rise in the stream has shoved out some ice that was in danger of clinging to sand bars four or five miles south of Franklin where the great gorge of 1927 gathered. Observer R. A. Fergus reports shore ice four inches thick, but the channel is 200 feet wide above and below the city.

2-ALARM FIRE ON NORTH SIDE

Damage estimated at $14,000 resulted from a fire which swept through part of the second floor of the Reichart Furniture Company store at 1926-1930 Beaver avenue, late last night.

Two alarms brought a dozen fire companies who battled the flames for two hours. For a time it appeared that the three-story brick building would be enveloped in flames. No one was in the building when the fire broke out. It was discovered by a neighbor and when firemen responded, they summoned additional companies with a second alarm.

57 NATIONS PAY BRIAND TRIBUTE

PARIS, March 12.—(AP.)—The people of France and representatives of 57 nations united today to pay a farewell tribute at the funeral of Aristide Briand, the man who launched a world-wide crusade for peace.

Premier Andre Tardieu, delivering the funeral oration, called him "the prince of orators" through whom France's desires were voiced.

The ceremonial was one of imposing grandeur such as is rarely seen in Paris, an outward sign of the deep inward sorrow of the country over the death of a statesman who, while serving his country, also strove to serve humanity.

Representatives of the church and the state joined in the offer of supreme homage. Cardinal Verdier, of Paris, gave the benediction of the Catholic Church in the clock room of the Foreign Office at the Quai d'Orsay. Premier Tardieu spoke outside the gates of the Ministry to a crowd of thousands.

From early morning until 11 a. a., a continuous file of people passed before the bier in the flower-bedecked clock room.

'Blue' Spring Forecast By Pitt Style Show

This will be a "blue" spring, according to the style show modeling the latest fashions for men and women shown before nearly 500 University of Pittsburgh co-eds and college men in Heinz House on the campus yesterday afternoon. Under the direction of Miss Grace Ely, of the Research Bureau for Retail Training, 25 Pitt mannequins and mennequins strode forth in finery destined to influence the student's choice of clothes for the Easter Parade. Miss Ely said:

"The military and bicentennial influences are apparent in the red, white and blue of street and sport clothes this spring. A great deal of bright color in scarfs and accessories is evident. The molded silhouette is the thing. Dresses are high waisted, showing the empire influence which persists. They are all elaborate above the waist line, with soft draped effects around the neck. Pastels in water-color shades are popular for evening, with sandals. Street footwear is a cross between an oxford and a pump. Blue is the spring color. Next comes black with bright trimmings. Beige is very important. There seems to be very little gray."

The show, sponsored by the Pitt Weekly and the Panther, this year included 13 men chosen by a committee of 10 girls.

FLIERS ADVISE BOYS TO WIN FREE TRIP

Youths Flock to Airports To Seek Knowledge on Proposed Detroit Tour

Grab this opportunity!

That's the advice of the fliers and airplane experts out at Bettis Field, Rodgers Field and the municipal airports who know what they are talking about.

The opportunity referred to is a free airplane trip from Pittsburgh to Detroit and return to be awarded by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, in co-operation with the National Aircraft Show and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America. The contest is open only to boys between 15 and 20 years of age and is launched for the purpose of creating a greater interest in aeronautics among the youth of Pittsburgh.

Well, the boys have been swarming the local airports, particularly Bettis Field, looking for the information required for the correct answers to the questions in the contest.

The boy who turns in the most nearly correct set of answers and writes the best 100-word letter on the advantages of air mail and air travel will not only get the free trip to Detroit and return, but will also be given a 60-mile air trip over Detroit, a personally conducted tour through the National Aircraft Show which opens Saturday, April 2, but will also tour the interesting places of Detroit by automobile and will visit the Ford automobile plant.

There are 24 questions in the test—two every day. The two for today are as follows:

14—(a) What types and makes of planes do the air lines operating in and out of your city use? (b) How many pounds of mail and how many passengers can each plane carry?

It is not too late to enter. If you missed the first 12 questions you can get them by sending six cents in stamps and asking for Thursday's and Friday's Sun-Telegraph. Address your request to the Circulation Department, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

GOING

Leave Pittsburgh Tuesday, April 5, 11:30 a. m.
Arrive Cleveland Tuesday, April 5, 12:50 p. m.
Century Air Lines—No. 3.
Leave Cleveland Tuesday, April 5, 1:30 p. m.
Arrive Detroit Tuesday, April 5, 2:45 p. m.

RETURNING

Pennsylvania Air Lines—No. 4.

Arrive Pittsburgh Friday, April 8, 5:45 p. m.

Do not send in any answers until the entire 24 questions have been printed. They must, however, be in—addressed to the Aviation Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.—before midnight, March 23. They will be examined by a board of three judges, and their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be made to the contestants so tied.

SIMPLICITY IS THE THEME OF SMART SPRING FROCKS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 12.—Lines still point the way to smartness. Not only the lines of the model, but the diagonal lines of the various woolens and the lines formed by the ever-smart pin tucking that is seen so much just now. A grand idea is to pin-tuck a blouse or bodice to follow the lines of the ribbed woolen, a fashion that has just been launched along the Riviera. Simplicity is the theme of most of the frocks seen at the various winter resorts. Life is much less complex and exciting than it used to be and clothes are paced in the same gait. Novelties are conspicuous by their absence, so are freak clothes. Instead we have smart little suits, attractive and wearable, and charming frocks that have a fine dressmaker air about them, but are careful not to flaunt it. One has a feeling, one knows, that the clothes one sees are expensive, but yet, on first glance there is nothing to substantiate that idea. And this is the type of frock that will be worn for the present, during the day anyway. We are chic, rather than elegant, these days, an infinitely better idea, so far as the woman who really understands clothes is concerned.

* * *

SHOWN TODAY we have a frock and a suit, both seen at Cannes and both typical of the type of garment worn this season at that most delectable resort. The Worth frock was sketched at teatime at the Cannes Casino and shows well how toned down clothes are at that resort this year. The frock is fashioned of heavy black georgette and has elaborate sleeves showing insets of white mousseline and small rosettes of real lace. The high neckline, a new tendency for spring, has a narrow lace edging. Three tiered peplums cross the hips and disappear beneath a central panel back and front. The bodice has a suggestion of the bolero in its crossed, loose fronts, which dip down at the sides over the softly draped underpart. This dress is the kind of thing that is as much at home in town as at a smart resort.

* * *

THE ATTRACTIVE SUIT also seen at Cannes is by Bernard et Cie. It is one of the new woolens with diagonal ribbing in two tones of blue. The blouse is of white georgette and has the new idea of diagonal pin-tucking to follow the effect of the ribbing on the suit. At the side front of the blouse is a small opening flanked by buttoned lapels, from which emerges a small bow-knot of georgette. The neckline is bordered with narrow strips of crepe in alternating blue and white and there is a black patent belt that closes by means of nickel clips.

HAWAIIAN ECHOES -:- Star Says Islands Safer Than Hollywood -:- AMUSEMENTS -:- What the Critics Are Saying

Dolores Del Rio, Back With 'Bird of Paradise' Cast, Tells of Trip

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate

HOLLYWOOD, March 12.

All film travelers returning from Hawaii recently echo the same thought—the islands are receiving a very unfair deal because of that unfortunate attack episode.

Dolores Del Rio is their latest defender. I saw Dolores a few hours after her return here with "The Bird of Paradise" troupe. Wearing a trailing black negligee, trimmed with gold, she presented a vivid, sophisticated picture—a woman in a different world from Launa, the native girl she is playing in her new film.

Dolores Del Rio

"I felt safer in Hawaii than I do in Hollywood," said Dolores in reply to my queries. "My advice is for everybody with a little money to go to Hawaii and have a good time. Everybody over there is trying harder than ever to be courteous to visitors. And I never detected the slightest disrespect in the attitude of the natives."

"They love to sing and dance," she said, "and they take to the camera without a bit of self-consciousness. You can't shoot a scene too many times for them either. Their enthusiasm is boundless."

An excited member of the returning company is an Hawaiian who plays Dolores' father in the picture. He will remain in Hollywood to finish up his part and to give technical advice on interior scenes.

Dolores reports that the famous volcano scene is still in "The Bird of Paradise" but that otherwise there is very little similarity to the play. The company ran into bad weather, but got most of their out-of-doors scenes. A few days in Catalina will complete them. In addition to this, however, there are about four weeks of interiors.

During every scene in the film, Dolores wore an almost invisible platinum chain, suspended to which is a tiny letter C set in diamonds. Cedric Gibbons had it made at Carter's and hung it on her neck just as she left for the islands.

AND SO TO GOSSIP

Visitors to the Paramount prop room are wont to smile with sardonic amusement as they reach a certain corner. Hanging next to each other are two large paintings. One is the late Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria and the other is "September Morn." . . . Maybe my story about Pat O'Malley's undeserved hard luck did some good. At any rate, he has been signed to play an important part in Rex Bell's first starring picture, "The Arm of the Law." Tremm Carr is making it . . . now that Ramon Novarro is appearing in a football picture, the irrepressible Bill Haines calls him "The Singing Center." . . . Mae Clarke is improving so rapidly she may be out of the hospital in a week . . . Zasu Pitts has signed a long-term contract with Universal . . . Harold Lloyd never reads press clippings.

Zasu Pitts

MESSAGE FROM DOUG

The daily short wave radio message from Douglas Fairbanks in Papeete says that first test shots for "Tropical Knight" were made yesterday. The company wasn't ready, but it happened to be a day when all the native omens presaged good luck. Every effort will be made to comply with superstitions and beliefs of the Tahitians. Around the South Seas they tell a story that the late F. W. Murnau failed to do this. When natives heard of his tragic death, they shook their heads knowingly.

LUCK FOR HARDIE

Some time ago, Hardie Albright bought up his contract from the Fox company. Hollywood wiseacres said it was a risky thing.

But today the young actor signed a long-term contract with Warner Brothers, where Daryll Zanuck and his associates predict a good screen future for him.

Hardie's first part at Warners was in "So Big." George Arliss saw the picture and personally selected him to play in "A Successful Calamity." Now he's to go into "The Jewel Robbery" with William Powell and Kay Francis.

Crook Movie In Davis

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

In any language $375,000 is no sum to be mentioned or treated lightly. Yet in the gay crook drama, "Cheaters At Play," emeralds or "rocks," as we crooks call them, of that value pass from light fingers to light fingers with astonishing rapidity, and in addition there isn't much weight or solemnity to the narrative treatment of their varied meanderings from owner to crook, to crook, to owner. It opened in the Davis yesterday and will be in the Enright three days, beginning today.

Thomas Meighan is featured and, in the carefree, blase kidding manner of a crook turned straight, he has quite a lot to do with seeing that an old pal of his younger days, an ex-burlesque queen, who has married into money, does not suffer the loss of her jewels, even though she is naughty enough to want to beat the government in the matter of a sizable sum in duty. That being the reason why she hides them around where crooks can find them. And you never saw so many, the boat where most of the action takes place being fairly infested with them.

Charlotte Greenwood is the ex-burlesquer, and she wisecracks herself almost out of the social register but into a lot of laughs. William Bakewell does a good job, too, of depicting a young crook and of dividing the romantic bits with Linda Watkins. James Kirkwood, Ralph Morgan and Barbara Weeks also are prominently concerned, Kirkwood as a detective with Mr. Morgan and Miss Weeks as part of the criminal population.

INCOME TAX RETURNS

Suggestions to Aid in Making Reports to Government

Amounts paid or accrued within the taxable year 1931 as interest on indebtedness are deductible, with certain exceptions, from gross income in determining net income. Such items include interest on borrowed money to defray personal expenses, and on money borrowed for the purchase of real or personal property. If a person owes money on a lien or mortgage on his home, the amount of interest on such indebtedness may be deducted. Indebtedness, however, need not be evidenced by lien, judgment, or mortgage to make the interest thereon deductible. Frequently indebtedness is evidenced only by a note without additional security.

A taxpayer may borrow money from an insurance company. Even when such money is used to pay the premiums due upon the policy, the interest paid thereon may be deducted.

Interest paid on behalf of a friend or relative where there is no legal obligation on the part of the payor is not deductible. In such cases the amounts are equivalent to a gift.

As interest paid is deductible, so is interest received taxable. All such amounts, including interest received on bank and savings deposits, must be included in the taxpayer's return of gross income.

Farrell Hero In Warner

By MILDRED FILLMORE

"After Tomorrow," one of those romantic dramas of everyday people which Director Frank Borzage can do so well, is the new picture in the Warner.

Charles Farrell is starred and Marian Nixon plays the heroine role. Say what you please about Mr. Farrell, he is as pleasant a young Romeo as Hollywood has to offer.

There is a splash of "Street Scene" about the film in its projection of an element of neighborhood life. Then too, the girl's mother, portrayed by Minna Gombell, recalls the unfortunate woman in the Elmer Rice drama.

This mother is one of those women who at 40 is obsessed with the belief that she has a right to happiness. And "happiness," in this case, is not her plodding husband, but the boarder.

The boy's mother isn't much of an aid to the young sweethearts, either. She is a woman, sloppy with sentiment, who bemoans the fate of the mother bird, forsaken by her young.

Not startling, but entertaining—this is "After Tomorrow."

Marion Davies Is Pleasing As Polly

By GEORGE SEIBEL

That picturesque emotional thriller of 20 years ago, "Polly of the Circus," has been fitted with up-to-date slang for Marion Davies, and she reads half a chapter from the Book of Ruth while Clark Gable turns his collar around and wrestles with his uncle the Bishop, interpreted with episcopal dignity by C. Aubrey Smith.

George Seibel

It is an appealing romance of the eternal type and affords many opportunities for the charming comedienne to push pins into hypocrisy and show the happier side of the sawdust ring.

You see, Polly meets with an accident while the circus is playing just opposite the rectory of the clergyman whom she had accused of defacing her lithographs with unseemly skirts. So the clergyman had to admit her into the rectory until her dislocated bones had been relocated.

Of course, since Polly is no other than Marion Davies, and the rector no other than Clark Gable, the Bishop must say "O. K." after her suicidal intentions have been thwarted just in the nick of time. It is a pretty romance well done.

The best thing in the stage show is a menagerie of dogs who prove delightful comedians. There is also a pair of dancers who waltz and adagio with grace and abandon.

A trio of skaters, a hallelujah singer and an agile acrobatic dancer received much applause, as did Al Wohlman for several songs. Lois Miller sang very well, but the song words flashed on the screen leave one wondering whether anything soggier or sillier could be found.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal.,
March 12.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Will Rogers

Two weeks ago I had two hours with Al Capone. (That raises Arthur one hour.) He told me all that I read he told Mr. Brisbane, and more. But there was absolutely no way I could write it and not make a hero out of him. Everybody you talk to would rather hear about Capone than anybody you evere met. What's the matter with an age when our biggest gangster is our greatest national interest. Part is the government's fault for not convicting him on some real crime. Now will somebody please suggest what to do with the story I got bottled up within me and be fair to everybody.

Yours, WILL.

Movie Stunt Fliers in Stanley

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The stunt fliers, those gentlemen of the air who put the thrills into Hollywood pictures, are glorified, or partly glorified, in "The Lost Squadron," which opened yesterday on the Stanley screen. It is aviation from a new angle.

This production combines everything from an Armistice Day to a murder, and if sometimes the story gets incredulous, you don't have to believe it. It is exciting melodrama and good entertainment anyway.

Three crack U. S. Army aces return from the war and find that, in spite of all the grand speeches made by the windbag orators, things aren't what they were when they went away. So they ride the freights into the California sunshine and become movie aviators.

MUSKETEERS OF THE AIR.

Richard Dix, Robert Armstrong and Joel McCrea portray these Hollywood musketeers of the air.

Eric Von Stroheim, who directed the film, also plays the role of a director. While his stunt men soar above him, he stands by the cameras and hopes for an honest-to-goodness smash-up. Isn't he the nice man?

Mr. Dix and Mr. Armstrong are destined to pass out of the picture by the crack-up route, but Mr. McCrea is allowed to live.

A CORPSE GOES RIDING

Dorothy Jordan and Mary Astor are in the cast.

"Ship Ahoy" is on the stage. And the tipsy act of Evelyn Wilson, impersonator and singer, proves that it isn't a United States liner. The big sailor and little sailor—the latter a youngster—step, chatter and get a big hand. There are other imported entertainers, too. Dick Powell, popular as ever, handles his part of the show well. It ends with a couple of big guns booming right into the face of the audience.

Rynearson to Speak At Fraternity Dinner

Dr. Edward J. Rynearson, associate superintendent of public schools, will speak on the Sino-Japanese situation at the annual initiation banquet for alumni and active members of Delta Tau Delta fraternity tonight at Hotel Schenley. Other speakers will include the Rev. N. R. H. Moor, dean of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, and M. M. Grubbs, local alumni chapter president.

Peace Is Anything That Doesn't Make War Worse

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

NEW YORK, March 12.—The perfect peace plan is one that doesn't make the war much worse.

Geneva proves that all wars consist of two belligerents and 19 neutrals.

The League of Nations has a neat three-point plan that is as elastic as a hot Welsh rabbit on a fork. Stretching it too far doesn't harm it a bit. It's still good old cheese.

We don't understand it. But that must be the idea. The Japanese know they have won this turkey shoot. The diplomats must fool 'em enough to make 'em surrender.

What will the Chinese get out of it all? They'll be allowed to snatch defeat from victory.

And how will it benefit the world? Well, the end of a peace conference is like when the man in lower five stops snoring.

Then we all get some rest.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Admonition

No, I am through and you can call in vain,
There is too high a fee for your caress;
Too great a share of heartbreak and of pain
And all the kindred hurts of loneliness.
What does it mean at best? A fevered hour
When I forget that you are not for me;
Your charm aglow like some exotic flower
To rouse again the waves of memory.

No, I am through—the trumpet call of youth
Must sound in vain—for I have need of rest.
You have no peace to give—no certain truth
And I am sick and weary of my quest;

Leave me to books and wine and memories—
Nothing you have to give can equal these!

—Kid Kazanova.

The Retort Worse

Of all the feuds between critics and actors, the one in which Percy Hammond triumphed rates among this pillar's favorites. An actor carried a long grudge against Hammond because the critic had given him a wound that wouldn't heal. The newspapers discussed the the quarrel often.

After a long absence from the town the star returned in a new show. The premiere was all the more exciting because the familar-with-the-fight auditors wondered how Hammond would report on his foe.

True to his public, Hammond wrote about the opening for almost a full column and didn't mention the player until the very last lines, when he penned:

"The star, who plays the hero on this occasion, fortunately gets no opportunity to do the things he does so badly."

Heheheh

Leave it to Bugs Baer to top his tormentors. One of them said of him:

"Baer isn't a good Friar, he's nothing but a Lamb in cheap clothing!"

He replied:

"And, furthermore, when I first came to New York I was a gigolo, but I had to give it up—as the hours were too long!"

Observation

"It takes an awfully wise girl to look as innocent and unsophisticated as a man thinks she ought to be."

Deadly Parallel

Some Day the referee called us to the middle of the ring and told us to fight with one arm free and to let go when he said, "Break." Before I turned to my corner Myberg made a disturbing remark. "Mr. Referee," said Myberg, "do I have to go to my corner when I knock him down, or can I stand over him?" —Eddie Eagan, Satevepost, Mar. 5.	After Gorman told us we were to box under the straight Marquis of Queensberry rules, Gavegan turned to him and with a poker face asked: "When I knock him down can I stand over him and hit him when he gets up or must I step back 10 feet and wait until he rises?" —Gene Tunney in Collier's, Feb. 20.

Such Pals!

It was one of those undressing room tiffs, and two terpsichorines began snapping at each other again.

"Oh," groaned the first, "you and your big shot friends! I wouldn't trade all of yours for my movie star friend whom I have eating out of my hand!"

"Hmpf" sneered the other belittler, "what's so marvelous about knowing Rin-Tin-Tin?"

The Tragedy of Humor

One of the girls about town thought up what she considered a pretty good joke and sent it to the humor department of a nickel magazine. After a fortnight she got a letter from one of the editors saying that the quip was amusing and that it would be accepted, but would she please send them three business references? No mention of payment, however.

She sent the three business references, and after another two weeks received another letter, thanking her for the references and saying that the following Tuesday was "settling up" day at their offices, and at that time she would receive $5.

As If We Didn't Know

And La Guinan observes that cave men used to knock girls senseless, but, of course, that's not necessary now.

O, Mr. Wilstach!

For the Book of Best Similes: Phillip Barry: I am slipping like a sophomore's sock . . . Sara Ware Bassett: Severe as a clock. . . . Ralph Wilk: Useless as a chain letter . . . Pathfinder: Full of grunts as a Greek wrestler. . . . Jack Foster: They stood together as unconcerned as a park bench in January . . . Ted Cook: Busted as a Christmas doll on the 26th; also: Awkward as being introduced to your first wife's third husband by the second husband of your fourth wife . . . Al Schwartz: Worn out like a collar of a yes-man.

Merciless Truth

With Apologies to Millay

My scandal burns up all my friends,
It gives them all a fright;
But ah, my foes, such are the frends
Of clandestine delight.

—V. C.

Look, Look! He's Mad!

That member of the House of Representatives who will have to pay henceforth to have his name advertised here (and at Amusement Page Rates, which are steep!) came to New York the other evening to entice the local yokels (reporters) into giving him some more publicity.

He changed his mind again. He didn't think George Jean Nathan was an "intellectual anarchist," etc. Instead, Mr. Nathan knew his groceries and was quite a guy. (Nathan'll never forgive him, now!)

"Nathan," says the Cong-yes-man, "exemplifies the true idealist in play reviewing. Walter Winchell is at the other end of the scale."

Heheheh

And Lee Wahl observes:

"I see where a member of the House of Representatives is going to review a show. Now's your chance to catch up on some sleep—by imitating a Congressman in session."

Merciless Truth

Charles Josephs, one of the army of helpers, thinks this recipe is timely again, and it is. It ought to be published in every newspaper on the automobile page.

"Take one regular natural born fool, add two or three drinks of whoopee water and mix the two with a high-powered motor car. After the fool is thoroughly soaked, place his foot on the gas and release brake. Remove chump from wreckage, place in black satin-lined box and garnish well with flowers."

Add Pepitaphs

No. 16 from B. Benoff: "Here Lies W. W.—Trespassing Allowed" . . . No. 17 from C. F. Chew: "Here Lies W. W.—r.i.p." . . No 18 from L. P. Golos: "Here Rests W. W.—The First Good One He Ever Had." . . . No. 19 from M. M. Cohen: "Here Lies Winchell. Here he may lie. For now he's at peace. And so am I." . . . No. 20 from Ide Gruber: "Here Lies W. W.—Berried at last!" . . . No. 21 from Harry Stewart: "Here Lies W. W.—Gone, but Not Forgiven!" . . . No. 22 from an anonymous source: "Here Lies W. W.—Dog Gone!"

St. Patrick's Day Minstrels Slated

War, Steins In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Probably never before has the camera been able to bring to the motion picture screen such scenes of actual warfare as are shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, being seen in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. When the Japanese swept over the forts at Woosong and Kiangwan, Metrotone cameramen accompanied the infantry and artillery over the entire advance. The trip up the Whangpoo River is exciting and thrilling. Within striking distance of Kiangwan the big guns are brought into position and the bombardment begins. The infantry moves forward and the machine guns swing into action.

An animated map pictures the entire war zone. There is a vivid description of all the activities by the Globe Trotter.

Uncle Sam tests the eyes of the fleet during a "battle" in the Pacific off Hawaii. The airplane carrier Lexington is shown launching her winged brood. Dozens of planes hop off while the great ship steams along at full speed.

There are thrills galore in a subject that shows Miss Loraine Wallace, fearless young lion tamer entering a cage of five ill-tempered jungle beasts in Long Island City.

The strike of the German cafe owners against the tax on beer was a great break for the thirsty. To avoid paying it they gave away their beer. So great was the rush for free steins that the police had to be called out many times to check the rush.

Pretty Florida girls at Miami Beach engage in artistic dances in an exotic setting. Their costumes furnish a big surprise.

LISTENING IN—With the Radio Editor

Stokowski

The concert, on the air from 8:15 to 10 o'clock, is broadcast through 73 stations of the Columbia network, including WJAS in Pittsburgh. It originates in the Philadelphia Academy of Music.

The program, composed entirely of modern Russian music, opens with the symphonic poem, "Hyrcus Nocturnus" ("The Witches' Flight"), by Serge Wassilenko. Then follows Illiashenko's "Diptyque Mongol," relating to Jenghiz Khan. The first movement portrays vividly the scene in which the generals of the great conqueror put to death all who saw his funeral procession to prevent the news of their chieftain's death from spreading.

Next comes the "Symphony of Psalms," by Igor Stravinsky, probably the most famous of modernistic composers. Based on the 39th, 40th and 150th Psalms, the movements progress steadily from the humble, almost despairing cry from a soul in the depths, through a mood of dawning confidence to a triumphant song of praise. "Prometheus, the Poem of Fire," by the revolutionary Scriabine, and Moussorgsky's suite, "Pictures from an Exhibition," complete the program.

Of interest to everyone is the discussion of "The New Tax Bill" by Ogden L. Mills, successor to A. W. Mellon as Secretary of the Treasury, on WJAS at 10.

Program Pointers

"TRAFFIC CAST," by Secretary C. H. Roth, and road condition reports, the regular 15-minute broadcast of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, is on WCAE at 5:45. The program, heretofore given each Wednesday, has been moved permanently to Saturday.

Those Pickens Sisters are on WCAE at 9 tonight—and if you failed to "catch" them in their air debut Wednesday, don't miss them tonight.

Representatives of the Evangelical Lutheran Church and the Board of Christian Education of the Presbyterian Church participate in KDKA's "round-the-world" broadcast at 11:15. Speakers include the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr and the Rev. E. G. Tieman. The W. & J. Glee Club gives a musical program.

WWSW has the Yellow Jacket-London hockey game at 8:15.

Morton Downey and Tony Wons are heard at 7:45 over WJAS from Cleveland, where they're making personal appearances.

Orchestras on KQV tonight include Weber-Walker, 9:30; Don Shoup, midnight, and Jimmy Zummo, 12:30. Then, of course, there's the DX Revel starting at 1 a. m.

Arthur Anderson, Pittsburgh-trained basso, who recently returned from three years of operatic work in Italy, is heard in the second act of Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Sadko" on WCAE at 3 this afternoon.

"Cruel to Women" is the "First Nighter" presentation on KDKA at 9:30, with June Meredith, Don Ameche and Cliff Soubier.

A Chinese ritual commemorating the seventh anniversary of the death of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, founder of the Chinese Republic, is on WJAS at 10:45.

"The Drama of Electricity," with Charles Edison, son of the late Thomas A. Edison; James E. Davidson, executive chairman of the National Electrical Refrigeration Bureau, and Katherine Fisher as principal speakers is presented on KDKA at 5:15.

Hundreds of children avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing Uncle Kay-Dee in person in the meeting of the KDKA Kiddies' Klub in the basement of Kaufmann's today. Incidentally, the Kiddies' Klub program has been changed from 5:30 to 4:45 from Monday to Friday, inclusive.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

STOP THAT COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

This famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. Musterole gets action because it is a scientific "counter-irritant"—not just a salve—it penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

National Steel Cash Position Good at the End of the Past Year

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

NATIONAL STEEL came to the end of 1931 with a strong cash position and with the best record of earnings of any major steel producer.

Its construction program, undertaken to give the organization a strong foothold in the Detroit district and to round out production following the formation of the company through consolidation early in 1930, has been completed. Adequate financing was undertaken early in 1931, so that all contingencies are provided for even though the duration of the depression may be long.

Results for the first quarter of the present year will be less satisfactory than in preceding quarters, reflecting lower steel prices and the failure of production to increase, but it is understood that a profit is being shown. This indicates that results for the three months will be better than those of most other steel companies, many of which will report losses.

Hope Seen for Boost In Dividend in Future

THE REDUCTION in the dividend from a $2 to a $1 annual basis reflected the declining tendency of steel activity this year but a hopeful tone was apparent in the announcement made by directors following their meeting on Thursday. The statement said:

"In view of the fact there has as yet been no improvement in the steel business, the quarterly dividend has been reduced to a basis we could expect to continue even under continuation of present conditions. Just as soon as conditions improve so that quarterly earnings cover same and the prospects justify, the dividend will be restored to the old basis of 50 cents quarterly.

The dividend was earned in 1931 when net profit of $4,443,323 was equivalent to $2.06 a share. This compared with net profit of $8,415,822 or $3.91 a share in 1930. Earnings were in excess of dividend requirements in the first half of the year but were slightly under them in the second half of 1931.

Current Financial Position Is Strong

AT THE CLOSE of 1931 current assets were 4.74 times current liabilities. Current assets stood at $35,344,875 against current liabilities of $7,460,409. This left net working capital of $27,884,446 which was equivalent to $12.88 a share on the 2,156,832 shares of stock.

There is no preferred stock. The only capital liabilities senior to the stock are a mortgage of $3,033,333 of the Weirton Coal Company, a subsidiary, and $40,000,000 of 5 per cent first mortgage sinking fund bonds of the National Steel Corporation, due in 1956. The bonds were issued to provide for the expansion program.

BETTER BUYING POWER HELD VITAL BUSINESS NEED

FEDERAL BONDS WORLD AID REVIVAL

Problem Is to Encourage Those With Cash to Spend And Find Work for Idle

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service

NEW YORK, March 12.—The country is suffering from impaired buying power, which results from disturbed human relationships.

The way to solid recovery lies in ENLARGING AND BETTER REGIMENTING PURCHASING POWER.

We should judge business and governmental policies according as they promote or retard THE BETTER MOBILIZATION OF BUYING POWER.

Mr. Rukeyser

The problem is to encourage those with buying power to use it on the one hand and to IMPART PURCHASING POWER TO THE UNEMPLOYED ON THE OTHER.

Re-employment of some of the idle will relieve the fears of the gainfully employed who have not been disposed to spend normally in accordance with their present income.

CREDIT AVAILABLE

The problem of genuine reconstruction is not simple, but recovery can be facilitated by co-ordinating all agencies making for genuine economic recuperation.

President Hoover has indicated that the federal government should be in such position as not to require further government security offerings after July 1, 1932, in order that this money may be free for business and agriculture.

I think that it would be a fine thing for the government so to formulate its program that the money market would be relieved of uncertainty, and would know precisely what to expect in the way of federal offerings.

On the other hand, I do not agree that the federal government would be competing for funds with business and agriculture. There is no rigid supply of credit, which cannot be enlarged.

On the contrary, government borrowing creates bonds which are eligible for member bank borrowing at the Federal Reserve Bank, and which can be made the basis for a healthful credit expansion.

MANAGEMENT ON TRIAL

Management gets its severest tests when the major economic trends of the time are adverse. Management was certainly on trial in 1931. The Glidden Company, makers of paint and allied products, was among the select group which showed an increase in net profit in 1931. In explaining what lay behind the performance, Adrian D. Joyce, the president, modestly said to me:

"It is true we had a gain in net income despite the business depression, but it is my feeling that we really should do very much better before doing much talking about it.

"The better results for 1931 were undoubtedly due to the fact that during 1930 we studied our organization very carefully, eliminating all unnecessary and non-essential expenses and making sure that we had the right men in all key positions. At the same time, we proceeded to make a close analysis of our products and eliminated all items which we decided did not have a definite merchandising future.

"In making our budget of sales, income and expenses, we did not attempt to deceive ourselves, but based our estimates for both expenses and profits on the volume of sales that we felt very sure we could secure. In the working out of these plans, we find our company at the beginning of 1932 in very splendid position. We have no unsalable lines of merchandise on hand; our inventories are at the lower of cost or market; our staff is efficient, with all the deadwood eliminated, and best of all, the entire personnel is confident and optimistic."

COPPER ACCORD CUTS OUTPUT TO 20%

World Producers Agree On Further Curtailment; Deadlocked Three Weeks

NEW YORK, March 12.—(INS.)—The copper producers of the world have reached an agreement on further curtailment of output and on sales, after a conference lasting nearly two months.

Under the plan, production is to be further scaled down from 26½ per cent, the present quota, to 20 per cent, and the old agreement on world sales is to be continued.

INDEPENDENTS WARNED

At the same time a warning was sounded to independent producers that unless they fell in line with the agreement as reached by those interests represented at the conference, that the beneficial results hoped to be attained would be nullified.

The conference has been deadlocked for nearly three weeks on the sales agreement by refusal of a large American producer to join in any new compact. Full accord had been reached on all other points, and this last obstacle was finally surmounted.

PISART, GEDDES SAIL

The foreign producers, who have been attending the session, returned home last night on the liner Majestic. They include F. Pisart, managing director of the Belgian owned Kantanga mines in Africa, Sir Aukland Geddes, chairman of Rio Tinto and Rhokana companies, and Arthur D. Stokes, managing directors, Roan Antelope Copper Mining Company.

Stockholders voted to reduce stated value of the no-par stock to $5 a share from $12.50 and change par value of stock from no par to $5 par.

TRADE REVIEWS NOTE BETTER SENTIMENT

Mercantile Reports Say Confidence Is Spreading; Credit Situation Easier

NEW YORK, March 12.—(AP.)—The weekly mercantile reviews continue to stress the factor of improved sentiment in business and trade, but are conservative in appraising the actual gains, Dun's Review says:

"Developments of a tangible nature have given a distinctly more cheerful tinge to the general business situation. Already confidence is spreading, and there has been a lifting of pressure by banks in the sales of their investment assets and a decline in currency in circulation.

"Hoarding, which threatened to become a bogey, is fast fading into the background. It is becoming increasingly evident that the major portion of the evils feared for the winter did not appear; most merchants doubtless were suffering more from an oversupply of fears than from an undersupply of income."

Bradstreet's says:

"Reports from 55 cities of the country bear testimony to the unsettling effect upon early spring trade of one of the most widely spread storms of the winter. Beneficial effects of the recent low temperatures are evident in the sharply increased retail buying of household coal. Also, a few cities note the fillip given to clearance sales of heavyweight goods, shoes and rubber footwear, but a number of reports from middle and southern centers indicate interference with early spring buying."

Market Still Shows Scale Down Support

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 12.—The market so far continues to show scale-down support, but no aggressive effort to hold the list is discernible. This suggests further irregularity in today's short session, but the belief is that an effort to put up stocks will be made in the next few days from around current levels. They're worth watching.

Announcement of the copper agreement came as a relief to Wall Street. Those in the know declare that the most dangerous phase of the situation has passed.

One smart market student believes that if the 90 level on the averages is broken through, the market might have quite a ride from there. . . . His theory is that there was quite a bit of short selling around the tops of the present move, with stop loss orders placed around the 92 level. If the market gets enough momentum to go through 90, he reasons, it will catch these stops and run up at least several points more. . . . Part of the old Auburn crowd is understood to be running Case Threshing with the aim of punishing an overcrowded short interest. The stock had an interesting tape action yesterday, as if someone were caught. . . . The tractions continue well bought on recessions. . . . The dividend omission hasn't affected International Telephone much.

Big blocks which have been coming out in some of the oils are understood to be cross sales for a large estate. Rockefeller brokers were the buyers.

Weakness in Kreuger & Toll is attributed to liquidation for the account of a leading European family.

Pineapple Price Rise Constructive

CHICAGO, March 12.—The increase of 10 cents a case in price of certain sizes of canned pineapple this week by Hawaii Pineapple Company, which was followed by Libby, McNeil and Libby and California Packing Company, is considered by officials in the industry to be a sign of greater stability in the price situation in both this and other important packs.

GOOD SHOWING MADE BY STEEL

March Production to Show Increase Over February; Future Gains Expected

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel has no occasion to apologize for not showing seasonal increase at this time, since it has. Ingot production increased 12.2 per cent December to January, and 3.9 per cent January to February, making 16.6 per cent increase since December to February, and that is more than the increase shown in ordinary times.

In 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1929, February averaged 12 per cent over the preceding December, that being a showing for ordinary times. There was depression throughout the second half of 1927, and February of the following year ran 32 per cent over December, by reason of there being recovery. In 1930, February was up 45 per cent, while in 1931 it was up 37 per cent, and in both those cases there was an attempt at recovery which proved abortive.

RECOVERY GRADUAL

Steel has simply failed to make any substantial progress in recovering from depression, when nobody had even hope that it would. It has had more than ordinary seasonal increase, and it did practically as well in February as in October, with a daily ingot output of 58,382 tons against 58,977 tons, only 1 per cent decrease, whereas business in general got worse. All things considered, steel has really made a good showing for itself.

This month will probably run a little ahead of February, with an annual rate of about 19,000,000 tons of all classes of ingots, or more than two-fifths of the average rate in the very active seven-year period through 1929.

PRICES STRONG

Steel, moreover, seems now to have its future before it, which ordinarily is not the case in March. In six of the last eight years there was marked seasonal decrease after March and the exceptions, 1928 and 1929, were peculiar years, affording no precedent. This year steel is fully expected to continue gaining, though only at a very moderate pace, by reason of the usual seasonal influence being belated on account of buyers being conservative and procrastinating, and by reason of improvement in financial conditions.

The steel price stabilization movement has made further progress and is a success in so far as it can be called one when time has not afforded opportunity for the really crucial tests. It is conservative to say that the movement has more strength than appears on the surface. Following advances in the other lines involved, hot and cold rolled strips have been marked up $2 a ton.

AUTO TRADE PROTESTS

The essence of this movement, however, is not advances but arrest of the recent declining tendency, and stabilization or the establishment of firm prices. After declines covering a period of about two years the market was very steady during the third quarter of last year. Prices lately put out compare with that time as follows: Bars, shapes and plates, no change; automobile sheets, $4 a ton down; galvanized sheets, $1 down; black sheets, $4 down; cold rolled strips, $3 down; hot rolled strips, $1 down; wire nails, $2 up. The greatest net declines are shown by steel products used largely by the automobile trade, automobile sheets and cold rolled strips. Only one notable protest has been heard against the movement and it came from the automobile industry.

The price movement has neither driven in orders nor kept them out. Purchases continue to be made only as absolute needs arise. There are no important swings in any of the steel consuming lines.

MARKET SHOWS ADVANCES OF FRACTIONS

Steel Recovers Opening Loss; Corn, United Drug, Chemical Makes Gains

NEW YORK, March 12—(AP.)—Stocks showed good resistance to the selling movement which developed yesterday, with a number of leading issues recording fractional gains toward the end of the first half hour of trading today.

United States Steel, which lost a fraction at the opening, recovered all of its loss. American Telephone regained nearly half of its early loss of ⅝ point. American Can, United Drug, Allied Chemical and Case Threshing advanced fractionally above their previous closing prices. A feature of trading was early activity in Kreuger & Toll, 35,000 shares appearing on the tape in the first 15 minutes of trading at a price ⅜ point below the previous closing level. The copper stocks were steady to firm in quiet dealings.

New interest was drawn to the copper industry by the announcement that a long sought agreement had been reached on two important subjects, the curtailment of production to 20 per cent of capacity against the prevailing 26 per cent level, and an accord on the rules governing transactions of Copper Exporters, Inc., which markets the metal in world markets.

Further evidence of railroad ability to meet their financing needs was the information that Chesapeake and Ohio had been given authority to issue $28,000,000 new bonds as collateral for loans to take up outstanding notes with banks. This was accepted as indication that at least one important road could take care of its money requirements without recourse to government aid.

The weekly trade reviews had little new to offer, generally agreeing that business was poor save for the notable exception of the shoe industry, but again stressing the fact that business sentiment continues more cheerful than several weeks ago as a result of credit improvement. Easter buying was said to show a healthier glow of activity.

JANUARY TIRE SHIPMENTS UP

Shipments of pneumatic casings during January amounted to 3,253,086, an increase of 17 per cent over December, but 13.1 per cent below January, 1931, according to Rubber aMnufacturers' Association.

Production in aJnuary was 3,462,485 casings, an increase of 31 per cent over December, but ⅝ per cent under aJnuary a year ago.

Pneumatic casings on hand January 31 totaled 7,911,771 units, an increase of ½ per cent over December, although 11.7 per cent below January 31, 1931.

Consumption of crude rubber by manufacturers of the United States in February amounted to 30,011 long tons, compared with 27,962 tons in January and 22,797 in February, 1931.

Wall Street Interested in February Railroad Earnings.

There is considerable speculation in Wall street as to what the railroad earnings for February will disclose, although it will be two weeks or more before most of the reports are made public. February will be the first month to reflect what saving there has been in operating costs as a result of the wage reduction which went into effect at the beginning of the period. On this basis, some interests are of the opinion that the comparisons with the same month last year may be somewhat more favorable than those in the past, even if there has been continued falling off in the gross revenues.

Market interests state that there has been much better buying in Standard Oil of New Jersey. While there were reports of group activities in some of the other shares recently, it is contended that the demand which came into Standard of New Jersey was from important interests who were insisting that they were adopting a long-pull position.

While sentiment still is against the adoption of short position, there is a tendency to permit the market to indicate its next move before taking an active position. Conservative interests still feel that the long side is the safest if purchases are made on a scale during reactions and moderate profits accepted during subsequent rallies.

Dow, Jones & Co., in an analysis of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, says that no consideration is being given to reduction in the $9 annual dividend rate, although indications are that earnings for the current quarter will be somewhat under dividend requirements, as they were in the final months of 1931. It is expected that the company will draw upon its large cash surplus to maintain the dividend rate. Telephone connections of the Bell system in January, however, declined about 96,000—probably the largest decline in any month in the history of the system.

An unusual transaction in the New York Stock Exchange yesterday was a sale of 2,420 shares of Christie Brown & Co., Canadian baking concern, at $56.50 a share. This was the first transaction in this issue in this market since 1930. It was inactive all through 1931. It was quoted in the inactive list at $100 bid Thursday. In 1930, there were some transactions at $126.50 a share and $125.50 a share. Almost all of the stock is held by the National Biscuit Company, and brokerage quarters wondered where as large a block as 2,420 shares might have come from.

Results of the Treasury's latest operation offer ample proof of the widespread demand prevailing for sound short term investments. Subscriptions received for the new loans were equivalent to almost four times the total of $900,000,000 offered. The tremendous total of subscriptions received made it necessary to scale down allotments on the larger bids quite sharply. Subscriptions for the seven months certificates offered in the amount of $300,000,000 reached nearly a billion, while bids received for the one-year 3¾ per cent issue were in excess of four times the $600,000,000 offered. The remarkable response to the Treasury's March offering found reflection in a continued good demand for governments in the bond market, with some of the longer term issues pushing to the front.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

SENTIMENT IMPROVES

Lawrence Stern & Co. announces that a questionnaire which it has circulated among investment bankers throughout the country reveals a decided improvement in sentiment among the country's distributors of securities. Eighty per cent of the replies to the questionnaire reported definite gains in public sentiment.

MEAT PACKING

Financial interests identified with the meat packing industry are said to hold more optimistic views of the industry's possibilities for 1932. Some measure of stability in prices is looked for this year in contrast with the pronounced downward trend of 1931.

ELECTRIC BOND DIVIDEND SAFE

NEW YORK, March 12.—There apparently is an impression in some quarters in the "Street" that the Electric Bond and Share Company has omitted its preferred and common dividends. That situation possibly may have been created by the postponement of the date for their declaration pending approval by stockholders of the proposed reduction in common shares. A meeting of stockholders has been called for March 22 for that purpose, and immediately after stockholders approve the proposal, directors will declare the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent in common stock on the common and regular quarterly cash dividends of $1.50 on the $6 preferred and $1.25 on the $5 preferred stocks.

For the 12 months ended December 31, 1931, Electric Bond and Share covered its preferred dividends more than three times, having available $25,050,048 for total preferred dividends of $8,120,255. After payment of preferred dividends the balance of nearly $16,920,820 was nearly two times the amount necessary to pay the regular common stock dividend.

Pittsburgher Named Uddeholm President

Edward T. Corbus, formerly vice president of Edgar T. Ward Sons Company, has been elected president and treasurer of the Uddeholm Company of America, with offices in New York.

The plants of the Uddeholm Company are located in Sweden and the American unit handles the hot and cold rolled steel products of that company in the United States.

STRAWN FLAYS TRADE POLICY

PARIS, March 12.—(AP.)—The International Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution appealing to public opinion for abolition of quotas and other restrictive measures against trade and commerce as soon as possible.

The resolution recognized that such measures were necessary "in many cases," but declared that they had aggravated the crisis.

Silas Strawn, president of the American Chamber of Commerce, in an address denounced the French quota system of handing imports as a violation in many cases of the spirit and perhaps the letter of commercial treaties. Speaking before the International Chamber, he called recent legislation reducing permissible American imports of several commodities "an irritating step in economic warfare."

Foreign Copper Price Advanced

NEW YORK, March 12.—The foreign price of copper is 6¼ cents per pound c. i. f., Hamburg, Havre and London, with sales Friday of 2,500,000 pounds. Special offerings at 6 cents were withdrawn today. A limited tonnage is offered through Copper Exporters, Inc., at 6¼ cents, up ¼c. The official price of Copper Exporters, Inc., remains unchanged at 6⅝ cents.

Money Market.

LONDON, March 12.—Money, 1¾ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 2⅝@3½ per cent; three month bills, 2⅝@3½ per cent.

LOCAL MARKET MOVEMENTS NARROW

Fuels and Industrials in Previous Trading Range; Air Brake Dips Slightly

Moderate recessions were noted in securities on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in the short week-end session today. The fuels remained in the trading range in which they have been selling for the past several days with volume of business showing a slight decline from yesterday's rate.

Reduction of the Westinghouse Air Brake dividend to a $1 annual basis was reflected in a mild decline in that issue, indicating that the action had been discounted. The previous dividend rate was $2 annually. Mesta Machine was steady. Dealings in the heavy manufacturing group were very light.

South Penn Raises Buckeye Line Oil

South Penn Oil Company has advanced the price of Pennsylvania grade crude oil in the lines of Buckeye Pipe Line Company 5 cents per barrel to $1.35.

Tidewater Pipe Line Company announces a reduction of 3 cents per barrel in Pennsylvania crude oil in Bradford and Allegheny districts to $1.82 per barrel.

Youngstown Mill Operations Higher

YOUNGSTOWN, March 12.—Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company operations for the coming week are estimated at 22 per cent of capacity, compared with 21 per cent in the current week and 40 per cent in the like week of 1931.

Look For the Bargains In Tomorrow's Sun-Telegraph

At today's prices your dollars can work for you as they never have before. Clothing, food, furniture, automobiles . . . everything is lower in price now than in any period the most of us can remember. But this condition cannot last for long—prices are bound to rise; and, when they do, the dollars we now hoard will have only one-half or two-thirds their present buying power. NOW is the time to store commodities . . . not dollars.

Look through the advertising columns of the Sun-Telegraph, daily and Sunday . . . note the marvelous opportunities to save. Take advantage of these bargains now, when the purchasing power of your dollar is at its fullest. SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Vaughn Star of Future.
Meine Offered Increase.
District Boys Go Out.
Mackey Pleases Chiefs.
Neat Job by Battalino.
Grange Outgains Booth.

THEVENOW MUST FIGHT FOR BUC JOB

THE OPINION TO be formed from information coming out of the Pirate training camp is that Tommy Thevenow is by no means as sure of winning that shortfield job as he was thought to be when the Bucs were first getting down to work. He has just about the fight of his life on his hands to keep young Floyd Vaughn from crowding him out of the lineup. If any rookie may be said to have opened the eyes of veteran players and observers along the major league practice front this spring, that recruit is our Mr. Vaughn. Not even Frank Crosetti, with the Yankees, has splashed more color or class around the territory between second and third bases.

Floyd Vaughn

That Vaughn, barring accidents, will one day be Pittsburgh's regular shortstop, and a star at the position, there isn't a doubt in the minds of baseball men who know anything of his ability. They felt that way about him even before George Gibson took him out to Paso Robles to look him over. But the surprising part is that Vaughn promises not to keep them waiting for his arrival as long as they had estimated would be the case. As a matter of fact, he appears to be here already.

YOU MAY TAKE it as the verdict of the best minds on the Buccaneer brig that Vaughn is a born ball player and the best new shortstop that has climbed into a Pirate uniform since Glenn Wright was at his best. Even Manager Gibson, who doesn't wax enthusiastic without plenty of cause, went the limit in bestowing baseball praise when he said Vaughn reminded him of Honus Wagner.

Dependable dope from the camp is that Vaughn has displayed an amazing lot of native ability and in the general opinion has a wonderful future. He covers a great deal of ground, is a remarkable fielder in going both ways for a grounder, owns a great throwing arm and throws from any position. His stance at the plate is impressive, he has already shown that he can hit, he is fast on his feet and his judgment on the bases is that of a player with two or three years of experience.

THAT VAUGHN SHOWS the judgment of an older player is due to his uncommon natural ability and baseball instinct. Players thus equipped do not require the usual amount of minor league schooling to fit them for the majors. That's why young Floyd bids fair to be holding down a regular job in the majors long before the time it was conjectured he would be ripe.

About the only thing that may keep Vaughn from displacing Thevenow this spring is the fact that in all probability there will be another youngster at second base in Tony Piet or Howard Groskloss, and Gibson may not want to take a chance on two youthful regulars around the midway. But if Vaughn keeps going at his early pace, not even this item may keep him off the club for 1932.

IN AN INTERVIEW in connection with his holdout, Heinie Meine, Pirate pitcher, is quoted: "No, I wasn't asked to take a cut in salary, but I think I'm entitled to an increase, and I don't intend to show up in training camp until I get one." Any reader would naturally draw from those remarks the inference that the Pittsburgh club had not offered Meine a pay increase in recognition of his excellent record last season. Without entering into the merits of the case, that would be unfair to the club, for it may be said on reliable authority that the very first contract sent to Meine for this year called for a voluntary increase over his 1931 salary and this proffered increase was later given a boost.*

Regis Leheny

REGIS LEHENY and Eddie Quigley, Oakland lads, are making a tour of the major league baseball training camps in Florida. Leheny, a promising southpaw, had a tryout with the Braves last year, but a sore arm put him on the shelf.

This spring Regis is again in fine fettle and has offers from several minor league clubs. He may land in the International, where he has pitched before. Quigley made several shifts last year. He will start the 1932 season with a Florida club.

ANOTHER OAKLANDER IS going to make his bow in the professional ranks this year. He is Outfielder Brown, formerly of Schenley High School. Eddie Onslow grabbed him for the Harrisburg Senators in the New York-Pennsylvania League and intends to use him at first base.

Still another product of this district aiming to break into organized ball is Vic Dober, Homestead youngster, who will be among the numerous candidates for berths on Manager Leo Mackey's Cumberland club in the Middle Atlantic League. Mackey will have a young ball club, with several veterans as a nucleus. Yankee officials were greatly pleased with Leo's work in 1931 and the veteran catcher was given a nice contract for this year.

THOUGH BATTLING BATTALINO had figured on paper to defeat Eddie Ran when the latter took the place of Billy Petrolle in last night's fight in New York—as a matter of fact Battalino himself suggested Ran as the substitute—the former featherweight champion must be given credit for having done another neat ring job in giving away eight pounds and winning the decision over the Polish Eagle. Ran is quite a fighter and a dangerous righthand puncher, and it takes an exceptional battler to beat him. Evidently, Battalino is going to be as good at a heavier figure as he was as a featherweight. He has been mixed up in some shady dealings, prompted by other parties handling his affairs, but he sure can fight when he wants to turn on the steam.*

THE DECISIVE MANNER in which Schenley High School came through to beat Allegheny for the second time in three meetings and take the city interscholastic basketball championship leaves no room for doubt that the award goes to the right team.

The triumph of the Bellefielders is all the more creditable and convincing because it was scored by an uphill fight after the loss of the first game of the series. Two straight city championships and four in the last seven years is a record of which Schenley may justly feel proud.

FOOTBALL MAY NOT be seasonable, but George Trevor has made an interesting comparison by digging into the gridiron statistics to find the total yardage gained by two of the greatest running backs of the modern game—Harold (Red) Grange and Albie Booth.

Red Grange

In his three seasons at Yale, Booth gained 2,826 yards from rushes, pass interceptions, pass completions and runbacks of kicks. During his three seasons at Illinois, Grange beat this by 511 yards, totaling 3,337 yards by all methods of advancing the ball.

GRANGE HAD ONE advantage which Booth did not enjoy, as in Red's day the dead-ball rule had not been adopted and a defending player was privileged to run with a recovered fumble, but even allowing for this, Trevor contends Grange was markedly superior to Booth. The Illinois star was incomparably the greater climax runner, and his tall, rakish build gave him a stride almost double that of Albie. Besides being just as elusive as the midget Eli, Grange had what Booth lacked—a greyhound's turn of speed.*

LOCAL SKATERS BEGIN LAST HOME STAND

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets, back home after winning one and losing three games on their last road trip of the season, meet the London Tecumsehs at Duquesne Garden tonight in one of four games remaining on their International Hockey League slate.

Despite the Canary Shirts' rather unimpressive showing in enemy territory, they will go into tonight's fray only one game back of a play-off berth. This is where they were when they left for their last long jaunt, and the only reason that they still are able to see the money circle is because the Detroit Olympics have displayed entirely unexpected ability to absorb one defeat after another.

FEEBLE CHANCE REMAINS

At that, the road trip did the Jackets no good. When they left they had played two games more than Detroit. Now they have participated in three more frays than the Olympics, which means that the Michiganders have three chances to widen the breach between themselves and the locals.

Pittsburgh's mathematical chance of gaining the play-offs still is alive, but it is very feeble. In the event that the Olympics win three of seven games they have yet to play, the Jackets could get nothing better than a tie for the last play-off berth even if they won all four remaining duels. Detroit's new two opponents are Cleveland, tonight, and Syracuse, on Tuesday. The Olympics may experience some trouble in losing these.

And, furthermore, the Jackets may experience some trouble in winning tonight. They were handed a 4-2 setback by the Tecumsehs in London on Thursday, and London hasn't lost any star performers since that time. Despite the Tecumsehs' high place in the standings, they must win tonight to get an even break in the season series with the locals.

LINEUP UNDECIDED

Coach Charley Reid hasn't decided just how he will line up his warriors for tonight's fray. In a desperate effort to keep his team in the running he has been alternating Sonny Boy Baxter and Abbie Cox in the nets, and shoving Pat Shea in and out of the third front line.

Coach Reid's comment today was:

"We will play out the string."

By this Charley didn't mean that the Jackets would play out the schedule. He meant that they would strive for every possible victory in the hope that Detroit will keep right on losing. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh.		London.
Baxter	G	Stuart
Fraser	D	Holway
Raine	D	Hicks
Hodden	C	Hoard
Hommes	W	Pettinger
Denning	W	[illegible]

PITT, CARNEGIE BOXERS CLASH

The varsity boxers of Pitt and Carnegie Tech stage their long-awaited duel in the Tartan gymnasium tonight, closing the dual-meet campaigns of both schools. Both squads, after starting off with fine prospects, have been riddled by injuries and ineligibilities, and neither will be able to present their full strength in tonight's scraps. The first bout is scheduled for 8:15.

Sport Tales

It happened back in 1921, when John was a gob in the Pacific fleet, and it has to do with the time Bob Grant, former Olympic games heavyweight boxer, won three fights by knockouts in a single night.

Grant boxed on one of the battleships and knocked out his man in the second round. Then he went ashore to Oakland, Cal., to fight the first half of a double windup—this was in the days when California fights were limited to four rounds. He won by a knockout in the first round and hurried down to the ferry and across the bay and knocked out an opponent in the second round of the main bout at a San Francisco club.

GUEST-VOTEL TAKE LEAD

H. Guest and H. Votel, of East Pittsburgh, won the lead in the doubles and A. Porter went to the top in the singles, but Fort Pitt's leadership in the five-men teams stood unscathed after yesterday's bowling in the tri-state tenpin tourney being staged at the Iroquois alleys.

Guest and Votel aggregated no less than 1,208 to top the two-men play, with W. Drazio and W. Glass, of Steubenville, O., advancing to second place with 1,176. H. Henry and M. Williams, of Greensburg, were third with 1,173.

Porter rolled 678 to replace Bill Secrist as singles leader. He had 60 pins to the good. P. Swartz went into third berth with 617.

The best high score of the tourney went to Tony Buffone, of Steubenville, who had eight strikes in a row to eventually bowl 264.

The P. E. Denglers were best in the team rolling, but fell three shy of the mark set by the Fort Pitt Brewers, bowling 2,803. P. & L. E. knocked down 2,801 pins.

The all-events lead is in the hands of Porter, who has 1,835 for nine games. Bowling this afternoon and tonight will wind up the tourney.

30 School Squads To See Pros Play

When the Cleveland Rosenblum Celtics meet the Renaissance five, of New York, in a professional basketball contest in Motor Square Garden Tuesday of next week, they are certain to perform before the greatest number of Tri-State collegiate and scholastic coaches, and their players, than any other two teams in local history. More than 30 scholastic tutors have reserved space for themselves and their team.

Due to the conflict with the W. P. I. A. L. game at the Pitt Stadium, the pro game will not start until 9:15 or later. Those desiring seat reservations should call Motor Square Garden, Grant 3045 or Everglade 4297.

TITLE IS VACATED

CHICAGO, March 12.—(INS.)—After consulting one of the European federations, the heavyweight boxing throne of Europe has been declared vacant by the National Boxing Association. Hein Muller was titleholder, but because he did not defend his standing before his limit date, December 26, 1931, he automatically forfeited.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

It's no trick at all for the Pirates to develop star shortstops—they gave the diamond sport its greatest shortfielder in the famed Flying Dutchman and since Wagner left the field of battle the club has brought out other clever boys who left to sparkle in other settings.

Joe Cronin, regarded as the best in the game at present, learned his A. B. C.'s in Pittsburgh spangles, and Glenn Wright graced a Pittsburgh suit before he passed along. Before another year has passed you may see another departed Bucco near the head of the class. The reference is to Dick Bartell, of the Phearless Phillies.

A gent who should know his shortstops places Daredevil next to Travis Jackson, of the Giants, as the second best shortfielder in the National League. Bartell's new booster is Ivan Olsen, fighting Swede who performed in the Wagnerian role for the Dodgers.

Olsen regards Jackson as one of the greatest the difficult role has featured. Ever a hustler when he played, Olsen, doubtless, is attracted to Bartell by Dick's spirit. The Alameda wonder is not as fast as a lot of boys who perform in the shortfield, but Dick is as surehanded as they come; his arm is well nigh perfect and he has enough confidence for a roomfull of players. He's no bargain at the plate, either.

Still another Bucco grad may shine at the tough position in the majors. Cronin's buddie, Eddie Montague, is one of the principal candidates for the Cleveland job. The decision of Judge Landis which sent Joe Boley back to the Athletics is a "break" for Eddie. Moreover, Manager Peckinpaugh, of the Indians, has added confidence in the Native Son.

John McGraw rates Kiki Cuyler as the peer of outfielders. McGraw's opinion is interesting to me as I have long regarded Cuyler as the best. When Kiki raced around the field in his first Pirate suit he had the actions of a standout because he could do everything well.

STAR FLOOR FIVES NAMED

Speed, scoring power and experience are combined in the elements making up the mythical all-star collegiate basketball teams of Western Pennsylvania, selected for the Associated Press, on the basis of a poll of the coaches. The teams:

First Team.	Pts.*	Second Team.	Pts.
Lawry, f., Pitt	10	M'Dougal, f., Duq.	7
Jagnow, f., Car.	11	B. Smith, f., Car.	7
Brownlee, c., West.	20	[illegible], c., Gen.	7
Aultman, g., Gen.	13	Carhark, g., Alle.	9
Rice, g., Westm.	13	Siljander, g., West.	8

GUNDELFINGER ELIMINATED

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., March 12.—W. T. Gundelfinger, of Pittsburgh, was eliminated in the semi-final round for the annual Volusia golf championship over the Ormond Beach Golf Club course yesterday. He succumbed to Fielding V. Jackson, of Point Judith, R. I., by 6 and 5. In the other contest, Henry Haynes, of Lake Placid, N. Y., medalist, trounced Fred Merkel, of Ormond Beach, former New York Giants baseball star, by 5 and 4.

THREE CROWNS AT STAKE

Three championships, two in the National junior handball titular play, and the other in the Class A city squash racquets tourney, will be decided at the Keystone Athletic Club today.

Theos Manos, city handball king, matches strokes with a Clevelander, John Endzvick, in the singles, and, coupled with Frank Smith, a clubmate, Manos opposes Joe Goudreau and Jimmy Brown, of the Cleveland Y. M. C. A., in the doubles of the handball competition, at 3 and 4 o'clock, respectively.

McCook Reed, of the Pittsburgh Golf Club, meets Dave Gilmore, of the Allegheny Country Club, for the squash racquets crown.

In yesterday's handball tilts, Manos and Smith first won by default from Langfitt and Thornton, P. A. A., and then copped from Ed Donkin and Steve Graves, Cleveland Y., 6-21, 21-4 and 21-20. Goudreau and Brown won in the quarter-finals by default of Clark and partner, K. A. C. winning in the penultimate test from Philip Lapidus and M. E. Fierst, Y. M. H. A., 21-8 and 21-5.

Donkin and Graves had defeated H. S. Foley and R. Preininger, Downtown Y., 21-2 and 21-3, while Lapidus and Fierst set down A. A. Bialas and Harry Krailing, Jr., P. A. A., 15-21, 21-15 and 21-8.

Manos defeated Smith in the semi-final of the singles division by scores of 21-17 and 21-4. Endzvick tripped M. A. Bates, Dallas Y. M. C. A., former National Y. M. C. A. king, 21-14, 14-21 and 21-12.

LEHIGH QUALIFIES FIVE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., March 12.—(AP.)—Lehigh University, defending champion, continued to dominate the Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association last night, five of its team emerging victorious in the semi-finals of the thirty-eighth annual meeting, at Syracuse University. Cornell qualified three men, Syracuse and Princeton two each, and University of Pennsylvania, Penn State, Columbia and Yale one each.

BAT DEFEATS RAN

NEW YORK, March 12.—(AP.)—Christopher (Bat) Battalino, of Hartford, Conn., recent ruler of the featherweights, celebrated his debut as a welterweight last night by spotting Eddie Ran, of Poland, eight pounds, and then giving the Warsaw Wasp a brutal beating before a crowd of 18,000 persons in Madison Square Garden. Had the bout gone another two rounds, Bat probably would have scored a knockout.

LIONS BATTLE PANTHERS IN FINALE

Probable Lineup

Pitt.		Penn State.
Lawry	F	Thomas
W. Kowallis	F	McFarlane
Ochsenhirt	C	(C) Brand
Smith	G	Conn
McCamant	G	McMinn

By JESS CARVER

The intercollegiate basketball season sings its bye-bye tune to Pittsburgh tonight as the varsities of Pitt and Penn State clash in the Stadium Pavilion. Unless the Lions perform with immeasurably more class than they exhibited against Carnegie Tech last night, the Panthers figure to bring their arduous campaign to a close with a triumph, win a 50-50 split for the season and continue their long string of consecutive triumphs over State.

Timmy Lawry

State lost both ends of its double header with Tech last night, the freshmen bowing 33 to 26 and the varsity dropping a 40-27 decision.

Tonight marks the wind-up of the varsity careers of four Panthers, Co-captains Lawry and Willie Kowallis, Doc Kowallis, Johnny Brown and Wrobleski. Despite the fact that Dr. Carlson has five seniors on his hands, he will start his regular lineup, the same that turned State back on its own court last week. Lawry and Willie Kowallis will go at the forwards, Russ Ochsenhirt will be in there at center and McCamant and Don Smith at the guards.

Carlson looked over the Staters last night, and went home and had a good night's rest, which is something, what with one thing and another, he has not been overly fortunate to have this season. The Panther mentor has a mystery forward groomed for action tonight, but he may pack his mystery away in moth balls and save him for another season.

Coach Dutch Hermann, of the Penn Staters, likely will start the same combination that held Tech 14-14 for the first half last night, which will mean that McFarlane and Thomas will be at the forwards, Fred Brand at center and Conn and McMinn at the guards.

State took a 17-14 lead as the second half got under way, but the Tartans put on the pressure and with Webster and Smith showing the way, forged rapidly to the front. Smith added four more goals to his three of the first half and a foul for a point total of 16. Webster had three and as many fouls. State's scoring was taken care of mainly by a substitute forward, Davus, who had two field goals and two fouls.

Penn State's offensive lacked zip and drive and its defense was much too loose to hold in check the rush of the Skibos. By an odd and unfortunate twist of fate, little Jim Leonard, completing his career as a varsity performer for Carnegie, went without a field goal.

In the preliminary, the Tartan Plebes defeated the Lion Cubs, 33 to 26. The lineups:

BILOXI, Miss., March 12.—I don't blame Connie Mack for standing pat on last year's lineup. If you had a royal flush, including the ace of pitchers and the king of catchers, you'd stand pat, too.

Nick Altrock

Losing the 1931 world series was just an oversight. How did Connie know Pepper Martin had been taking a correspondence course in shoplifting, and was going to turn kleptomaniac when he got on the bases?

With Pepper subtracted from that series, the Athletics would have won and the experts would still be calling them the greatest machine ever assembled since Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin.

Yes, folks, Connie is standing pat, and he isn't bluffing.

SCHENLEY HIGH COPS CITY TITLE

N. KENSINGTON ADVANCES TO SEMI-FINALS

By JULIUS LEVIN

New Kensington High School champion of Section I, joined Ford City, champion of Section VI, in the semi-finals of the W. P. I. A. L. basketball elimination series and Schenley High captured the City League championship for the fifth time in yesterday's championship scholastic battles.

Schenley High, led by Arthur Hyatt, clinched the City League title in the afternoon in the Pitt Stadium pavilion when it took the third and deciding contest from Allegheny High, 31-18, while New Kensington advanced at the expense of East Pike Run, champion of Section XVI, in the evening by a score of 33-18.

As a result of their victory over East Pike Run the valley passers, coached by Carl Clock, earn the right to engage the Charleroi-Homestead winner in a semi-final duel in the Pitt Stadium pavilion on Pitt Stadium court next Thursday afternoon. The Homestead-Charleroi game will be staged next Monday.

ALLEGHENY FIGHTS

Allegheny, outclassed by Schenley in the last seven periods of their games previous to yesterday's struggle, put up a determined battle against the Section I champion but the Bellefield quintet had too much class for the North Siders.

Hyatt, just a mediocre performer in the second contest, struck his real stride yesterday and was the battering ram that Schenley employed to defeat the Springer charges. Hyatt kept feeding Turfley and Cates with accurate passes and they responded with field goals. After three periods of valuable yeoman service, Hyatt just to prove the contention that he still ranks with the leading scorers, broke loose in the final quarter with a flock of field goals to place the game in the bag for the Schenley quintet.

KEN HIGH IMPROVED

New Kensington, a vastly improved floor machine than that which defeated Sewickley Township in the second round of the W. P. I. A. L. eliminations, swept to victory without difficulty last night.

East Pike Run was unable to break through the valley defense and most of its successful shots were registered from beyond the foul line.

Dayoub, while he missed numerous easy shots, played a fine floor game and was instrumental in adding quite a number of points to the New Kensington total. Marino, who starred in the battle with Sewickley Township, had another good night and accounted for six baskets. Most of his scoring opportunities were provided by Dayoub, who fed the Italian forward with plenty of shots.

BAXTER BEATS M'ARTHUR

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

The largest crowd that has attended a boxing show in Eddie Kapphan's Arena in Addison street since he opened it—attracted by the slashed prices of 50 cents and $1—last night saw one of the best windup battles of the season here.

The contest almost resulted in a startling upset of the dope, with Charley Baxter, hot on the trail of a bout with Battling Gizzy, having to come from behind in the last two rounds to nose out Benny McArthur, of Fairmont, W. Va., via the referee's decision route, after having floored his man twice for counts of nine and having him down again as the bell ended the first round.

McArthur's game rally following that close call from a knockout in the opening session won the fans, and they were pulling for him to win, but he weakened in the closing stages and had to hold on as the deciding points were scored.

TOUGH OPENING ROUND

McArthur was staggered by a right to the jaw soon after the first round got under way. He began to move about and jab and was clipped by another right that dropped him for nine. Baxter was wild for the kill and soon nailed him again, and this time both went to the floor, with the clutching McArthur pulling Charley on top of him. After they were untangled, McArthur remained down for the count of nine and almost was counted out. Just before the bell he went down under another right, and he didn't appear to have a ghost of a chance as he moved back to his corner for the rest period.

Beginning with the start of the second round, Benny changed his tactics, moving about and jabbing and slipping inside Baxter's dangerous right. Then he began to throw rights of his own and to work inside. He jolted Baxter a few times and Charley soon lost the range entirely.

In the third, Baxter was woefully ineffective and McArthur beat him at his own game, sending three rights crashing off his jaw. The fourth round found Charley boxing as if in a daze and looking bad, and McArthur outboxing and outfighting him all the way. The fifth was tame, with McArthur still in the van.

BAXTER FINISHES STRONG

Benny tired in the sixth and was shaded as Baxter showed signs of returning to life, only to be slowed down again by a solid right that caused his knees to bend. In the seventh, Baxter began by forcing and scoring well, but unable to prevent McArthur from roughing him badly at close quarters. Midway, Baxter complained about his right eye, indicating he had been thumbed.

Baxter then moved back to some semblance of his fighting self and carried the last three rounds. He hurt McArthur with two good rights in the ninth and had Benny tincanning in the tenth. Only this strong finish pulled the fight out of the fire for Charley, and a rematch between the pair would be a good thing any time. For sheer thrills, rough work and willingness, the pair of lightweights put on a pip of a fight last night.

KNOCKOUTS IN PRELIMS

Davy Grove, of the North Side, bested Paul Oger, of Wheeling, McArthur's stablemate, in the eight-round semi-final, another hard-fought battle, and the two preliminaries ended abruptly. Eddie Shenn, of Turtle Creek, folding up and taking the full count before Max Elling, of the Hill, in the third round of the second bout, and Johnny Montebano, of Braddock, failing to answer the bell for the fourth round after suffering a bad beating from Johnny Hazel, making his professional debut in the opener. Elling was wildly acclaimed by a rooting section equipped with horns, while Hazel, with Cuddy DeMarco in his corner as manager and chief second, made an impressive debut.

GIZZY, WITZ SUSPENDED

PHILADELPHIA, March 12—(AP.)—The State Athletic Commission has suspended four boxers and two wrestlers for failure to honor contracts and other infractions of the rules. They are Eddie "Doc" [illegible], boxer; Mike [illegible], known as Battling Gizzy, of Donora, Pa., boxer; Billy Hall, boxer, of Pittsburgh; Lew Foster, boxer, of Pottstown, Pa.; Ernie Dusek, wrestler, of Omaha, and Charles [illegible], wrestler, of Boston, Mass. Abe Witz, a manager, of Canonsburg, Pa., was also suspended.

W. VA. TOURNEY IN SEMI-FINALS

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 12—Fairmont West, Huntington, 1931 champ, Parkersburg and Elkins moved into the semi-finals session of the West Virginia State High School tournament here last night.

The tri-final round brought out the best basketball of the tournament. In the first game of the evening Fairmont West Side had their hands full with the clever passing of Montgomery team, but finally won 13 to 11.

Parkersburg's Big Reds had little trouble in downing West Union 37 to 10. Feets Barnum, Parkersburg pivot man, was the big ace for the last year's runners-up.

Elkins earned the right to play in the semi-finals by taking a 24-to-22 decision from Wheeling. Elkins was entirely too smooth for the Wheeling entry, although the Panhandle team rallied late in the final quarter.

Huntington and Parkersburg are favored to meet in the final game this evening, a replica of last year's state classic.

In first round competition, West Union won from White Sulphur Springs, 28-20; Parkersburg beat Princeton, 26-25; Montgomery won from Kingwood, 27-14; and Fairmont West Side copped from Charleston, 33-21.

Huntington won an extra-period game from Hundred, 22-21; Washington Irving beat Logan, 32-27; Wheeling downed Beckley, 36-15, and Elkins topped Martinsburg, 26-25.

RUTH TO GET $70,000 OFFER

NEW YORK, March 12—(AP.)—The case for baseball's greatest indoor drama, "the signing of Babe Ruth" is being assembled.

Reaching the training camp Sunday morning, the Colonel expects to go into conference with Ruth immediately and sign the big fellow to a one-year contract for $70,000, the club's original terms.

Ruth has declared himself for a two-year contract at $70,000 or possibly a one-year contract at $75,000. His old contract which expired last fall was for $80,000 a year for two years.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 12.—The final session of the Pirates' training grind was to be staged this morning, and late today the entire squad will leave here for Oakland, where tomorrow they will stack up against the Pacific Coast League team of that place in a doubleheader.

Hurlers for the inaugural battles were very much in doubt, but Manager Gibson has Larry French, Bill Harris, Ervin Brame and Ray Kremer to choose from. Just who will get the assignments is not known, but Gibby expects to use at least two and possibly three pitchers in each game.

BUCS IN SHAPE

Ray Kremer requested that he be used in one of the games at Oakland, but Remy was stricken with a cold recently and may not be in condition to handle the assignment. Kremer lives in Oakland and would like nothing better than to chuck them against his home-town aggregation.

With only one practice session called off since the Pirates arrived here three weeks ago, the California climate and Old Sol certainly have aided the Buccos in getting into the best possible shape for the season.

Gibson has stood for no monkeyshines during the stay here. It was all work and play afterwards, and the squad certainly has derived the benefits of this system.

Gibby has only one other player besides Kremer on the sick list, Charley Wood, who strained a muscle while pitching Wednesday. He recovered sufficiently to take part in the workouts of yesterday and today, although Gibson has cautioned him to drill lighthly.

The ax fell on the Pirat. squad for the first time yesterday. Johnny Rice, outfielder and Lyle Robinson, pitcher, were sent to the Tulsa Club of the Western League.

Playing their last practice game the Regulars escaped defeat by deadlocking the score in the ninth inning yesterday, after both sides failed to make any more runs in two extra frames, the battle was called with the count standing at 5 to 5. It was the first extra-inning clash in the camp.

YANS OUTBATTED

The Regulars outbatted the Yanigans 13 hits to 11. Floyd Vaughn, Wichita recruit, was credited with four blows, including a home run. Earl Grace, who caught for the first team, collected three blows, one being a two-bagger. Vernon Kennedy for the Regulars allowed seven safeties in five frames and Charley Taylor held the enemy to four in six chapters. Bill Swift started for the Yans and was touched for five hits in five frames, while Johnny Niggeling, who went the rest of the route, was socked for eight.

Between Rounds

Both Benny Bass and Frankie Bojarski, who meet in the main bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night, are expected to work out in the Garden gym tomorrow afternoon.

The Young Rudy-Bucky Lawless fight is in at Erie next Friday night, with Jimmy Dean and Chet Smallwood boxing the semi-final, which means that a Tony Marino-Lou Mordy double windup there the same night is out.

Gus Salerno regards his bout with Tiger Joe Ward, the main bout at the Moose Temple next Wednesday night, as the most severe test he has faced since coming here and is training accordingly.

Bill Dommer announced before last night's show at the Kapphan Arena that it would be his last as matchmaker for the place. Amelio Meyers will succeed him.

Conventions Safety Zones For Human Behavior

That's how Judith started. She and her man loved each other. Wasn't that enough? He couldn't marry her; then; he hadn't yet won freedom from his wife. But what of that? Wasn't love as binding as a "man made law"?

Thus they reasoned in their stolen paradise. "Our love will last," they told each other. "We'll always be true—more true than many a married couple."

So they ran away to another state, and began a new life together, and then the baby came.

By this time Judith's man could have married her, but marriage didn't seem to matter. They were so happy! She was so sure!

Then came that terrible day when her happiness and security vanished in one frightful moment of discovery.

He loved another woman! He, who had been untrue to his wife, was now untrue to her, though she had become the mother of his son.

Judith had tried to beat the game, and failed; and in her agony she cried to us:

"Shall I fight to keep my baby's father? Or shall I go out of his life and let the other woman have him?"

FACED SAME PROBLEM

"Dear Sally—

"What would I do, if I were in Judith's place?

"I'd leave that man, pronto! And I know what I am talking about, because I once faced the same problem she is facing, myself.

"I was only a kid of 18, and I became a mother. The man never talked about marriage, but I loved him so, and trusted him so, that I thought it would be all right.

"Then, as I got older, I thought it over and over again until one day I concluded: 'Well, if he really loves me so much, he surely would be willing to give his boy his name.' So that evening when he came home, and after I had put Ralph, the baby, to bed, I had a talk with him and brought up marriage.

"Well, I thought he was going to eat me up, the way he raved; so the next day I made up my mind. I packed up and left, and I have never regretted it. I have worked and supported my boy. I did it for three years, and in all that time I never heard a word from his father. That is how much he loved us!

ADVISES HER TO LEAVE

"I am married now, and I'm right here to tell you that I have never been sorry for picking up and leaving that man when I did. I am happier now than I ever was with him. At least this man I have married thought enough of me and little Ralph to give us his name!

"I told him of my past, and he couldn't get over it. For some time he kept saying 'How could a man treat a girl, and his own child, like that?'

"Please tell Judith, from me, that that man of hers isn't worth wasting time on, and isn't fit to be a father. She will only be messing up her entire life if she insists on hanging onto him.

If he ever really loved her he would have married her as soon as he was able, at least. If he were worth the powder to blow him up he would have wanted to give his son his name.

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Jill's engaged! Extry! And Jean and Jeanne, and Jenny and Joan, and Jeanette and Jacqueline have all come—as one does to bring jelly to a convalescent friend—to see his picture and the ring! Jean draws a funny picture of Jill's present devastator. Jeanne says, "My moon and stars! Isn't he cute?" Jenny dazzles herself with the flashing stone on Jill's finger, and contemplates calling Jimmy right up on this dot and telling him she has changed her mind about being a pal and a brother to him. Joan pronounces him really rather nice, but secretly thinks that when she gets ready to melt into a warm and foolish state of matrimony, it will be with a more distinguished male than this one of Jill's. Good natured Jeanette leans and oggles and is all agog and pipes pretty compliments—and means it. Though she says right out, "But he isn't half as nice as my Johnnie!" Grave Jacqueline, whose thoughts are always dark to her playmates—unless they are scornful ones—stares thoughtfully at her own ring—and plans some day to make it over—when she has married Jerry—why Jill's ring is a third as big as hers!

And Jill! Jill is blind to any thought but the kindest—her face set toward the sun like a sunflower. Believing and feeling nothing but happiness and belief in the color, the romance, the truth, the rareness, the beauty of the whole world. For Jill's in love—and the plain young man who has ringed Jill's finger with a sparkling symbol, is Romeo, Leander, Napoleon, Apollo, Adonis, George Washington and Ramon Novarro all rolled into one!

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Introductions

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a stepmother, whom I call Ruth. My problem is: how shall I introduce her to my friends? Should I introduce her as "Mrs. Jones," or should I say, "This is my stepmother?" I would hate to hurt her feelings, as she is very pleasant to me; yet I cannot call her "Mother."

At the times when my father has been with her, as I made an introduction I have introduced her like this: "Mrs. Green, this is my father, Mr. Jones, and this is Mrs. Jones." READER.

The best way is to say, "Mrs. Robinson, this is my stepmother." Since "Mother" is out of the question with you, and most understandably in this case, and since "Mrs. Jones" would not give a stranger the pleasant feeling that your relationship with each other is agreeable, the form I have suggested seems to be the middle course.

Welcoming the Girl

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A young man and a young woman have an understanding between them. They are not yet engaged, but probably will be. He has not given her a ring. Should the parents of the man invite the young lady's parents to dinner first, or vice versa?

ED.

If the young man has told his parents of the "understanding," then it would be excellent form for them to invite the young lady and her parents to dine with them. Naturally they will wish to know them or if they already know them, to know them better and to "extend hospitality" to them and to show their welcome-into-the-family to the young lady.

Thanks for a Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I recently received as a gift a box of writing paper from a friend who lives in another city. Would it be the proper thing if I wrote the person on the paper she sent me, or would it be better to use other paper?

K. C. K.

To write your note of thanks on a sheet of the letter paper she sent you would be a charming and most appropriate compliment to her.

Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM
As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

How Many Tricks Can Y Win at Diamonds?

The following hand was recently played brilliantly by C. S. Lockridge. Bidding went as follows: Z, 1-Spade; no bids were made by A-B; Y, 2-Diamonds; Z, 4-Diamonds; Y, 4-Hearts (showing ace); Z, 5-No-Trumps (showing black suits well under control); Y, 6-Diamonds. The opening lead was J of clubs (the only unbid suit). Can Y fulfill his contract against any subsequent defense?

Y: ♠ 1065 ♥ AK ♣ 862 ♦ AK754

B: ♠ Q9874 ♥ 983 ♣ J109 ♦ 32

Z: ♠ AKJ2 ♥ 54 ♣ AQ4 ♦ Q1096

Like other leading experts, Mr. Lockridge possesses the ability of picking "the only hope;" that 8 of clubs in his own hand immediately suggested that he might squeeze B, provided that player held most of the missing spade strength, and his play from the first was based upon that hope.

It was barely possible, but quite improbable, that B had led the J from K-J-10, with or without added length. Z's Q covered the J, but A's K won the first trick, obliging Y to win all remaining tricks to fulfill his contract. The return lead was A's original fourth best club, drawing B's 10 and dummy's ace.

Subsequent play went as follows: The declarer ran off four rounds of trumps, winning the fourth trick in his own hand. A and B followed suit twice, then A discarded one club and one heart; B discarded a low heart and one spade.

Upon the lead of the fifth diamond, B discarded another heart; dummy let go its last club; A discarded a low heart. To squeeze B, the declarer's next lead was his ace of hearts, capturing B's last remaining card of that suit; both Z and A followed suit. Each player held just five cards, as depicted below:

Y: ♠ 1065 ♥ K ♣ 8

A: ♠ 3 ♥ QJ10 ♣ 7

Z: ♠ AKJ2 ♥ 5

The final bit of pressure was put upon B when Y led his K of hearts. B either had to let go his certain stop to the spade suit, or he had to discard his top club. It was possible that A's one remaining club was the 8, and that Y held the missing 7. Faced with that one chance to defeat the contract, B was forced to let go his club and save his certain stop to the free run of four spade tricks; dummy and A played hearts, Y led his good club, and discarded dummy's lowest spade. The only chance that the declarer now ran was that the missing Q of spades was held by A. As the cards happened to be dealt, nothing could prevent Y from winning six odd.

The 'Smart' Acting Child

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Down through the long generations has come the inevitable cry of: "Smarty! Smarty!" directed at the child who shows off. All the parental theories and attacks of this show-off problem probably make exceedingly little impression on the youngster, as compared to the ridicule and usual exile from his former little friends.

There is definitely a show-off period to be endured. It is one problem which parents can legitimately almost ignore for it will pass, with the aid of time and growth and young companions. I say "almost," advisedly, for it needs some parental thought, to be sure.

The father and mother who harp too violently on the seemingly silly and obnoxious antics only emphasize the "show-off" impulse in the child, and he continues them in a spirit of defiance.

There is a "smart" acting of children, usually in the presence of older people, which comes from an excrutiating sense of self-consciousness. There is also a more legitimate show-off period, when for possibly the only time in the child's life he truly feels superior and wants the world to know it.

This period usually develops after he has entered school and begins to feel that he knows things. The flip remark, the oft reiterated "oh yeah," or other slang phrases which make mothers long for a nice quiet insane asylum, are then in evidence; but if given little attention they usually run their course.

The child at this stage likes to contradict statements of others and to make his own, which, in the light of his limited knowledge and consideration of the matter being discussed, seem to him right at the moment. These mistakes can be firmly but kindly explained and a courteous attitude regained if the parent has insight and patience.

Truly, a little learning makes us all act foolish, and there is no reason to expect the child to get by unscathed by the "I'm a smart guy" delusion.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian's Revelation Almost Ruins Madge's Vacation Plans

At Dicky's quick query: "What's that?" I could not help a glance of dismay at Lillian, and, although her face remained composed, I saw by her eyes that she also realized the mistake she had made in speaking of the threat to take my play to another producer, that I had made to Philip Veritzen.

Even though Dicky knew—had always known, in fact—that I had no romantic interest whatever in the great producer, he could not control the rabid personal jealousy of the man which always has been his since the first day that Philip Veritzen came into my life. How he would react to the knowledge that Philip Veritzen had "forbidden" me to go away with Dicky for this week-end holiday, saying that he would distract my mind from the completion of my fourth act, I did not know. He might take it quietly—on the other hand he might spoil our entire holiday with his jealous anger.

But I need not have feared. Lillian, as always, was equal to the situation. The telltales' startled look vanished from her eyes, and her voice held only nonchalant amusement as she answered Dicky's question.

"Oh! you know Phil—always the mighty high-powered executive—trying to shave days, hours or minutes off a schedule. But he struck the wrong person when he tried to high-hat Little Madge, the Pride of the Grahams. She sent her own chapeau on an altitude ascent, and old Phil still has his neck craned toward the clouds, watching it ascend."

"And you told him you'd take your play to another producer because he wanted you to get that fourth act out in less than 10 days?"

"It wasn't that, exactly," I began, unwilling to benefit by Lillian's airy falsehood, and equally unwilling to let her down after she had uttered it for my benefit.

"And you got away with it!" Harry Underwood, whether accidentally, or obeying a signal from his wife, cut in to the conversation in a tone that expressed the extreme in awed admiration. "I'll bet Phil Veritzen hasn't backed down before in 40 years come Michelmas."

"It wasn't what he said, exactly, but the 'nawsty way he said it,' Lillian quoted. "But it was worth a million or two to hear Madge lay him out in that cool, calm, well-bred voice of hers, never raising it, but raising blisters with every syllable."

"How come you know so much about it?" Dicky demanded, turning to her. "Nobody else was admitted to the bout. Didn't you have a ringside seat?"

"No, but I had a peach of a place in the front gallery," Lillian grinned at him. "It was in the little room off the library. I couldn't see the great man in action, but I could hear, and I sure was rewarded when Phil backed down like a cooing, if a bit sulky dove—if a dove ever backs down."

We were all laughing now at her nonsense, and I saw that the danger of Dicky's knowing the real cause of my ultimatum to Philip Vertizen was past. Some time, no doubt, I would tell him of it, myself, but not just now did I wish everything spoiled by the revelation. With a sense of a haven reached, I looked down at Junior and Roderick, who, trained not to interrupt a conversation, were, I knew, almost at the bursting point with questions.

"Mums!" Junior demanded vociferously, when I smiled down at him. "Are you going away?"

"Yes, darling, but only for the week-end. I'll be back on Monday."

"Oh, ho!" he crowed, "but not back the way you think you will. Me and Rod know something and we're going to help—"

"'Rod and I,'" I corrected mechanically, and was startled by a burst of laughter from Dicky and Harry.

"If you live to be a hundred, old girl," Dicky said, "and do a little inculcating every day, you may be able to untangle Junior's first and second persons before you die."

"You bet your boots we're going to help," he said. "You just ought to see——"

"Suppose you all sit down to luncheon," Dicky interposed quickly. "You youngsters will have time to talk over your own affairs afterwards."

He put me into my chair, and in another minute or two the boys were discussing Katie's iced fruit cup with gusto, and apparent forgetfulness of their summarily restricted remarks. But again I had the sense of something afoot in the domestic menage of which I was being kept in ignorance.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

During the half hour of beautifying rites, just before going to bed, don't fail to give the finger nails a feast of cuticle cream, with the aid of an orange wood stick, push the cream under the nail eaves; it will roust out discolorations and keep the little claws from getting brittle.

It is an elegant idea to have powder of two tones, one lighter than the other, using the dark shade for day time wear. Don't begin the face flouring by flapping the powder pad on the nose. Start at the neck and work upward. Use powder, then dry rouge—if that's what you prefer—and powder again. This second application of the dull finish substance tends to blend the facial batik.

Eyebrow dyeing is being done in all the larger beauty salons. Time required is less than half an hour, and the expense is but a small sum. The most popular color for eye lambrequins and fringes is a dark, dark brown. Black is too closely related to the crayon, imparts a note of artificiality. Not that that matters with some dollies.

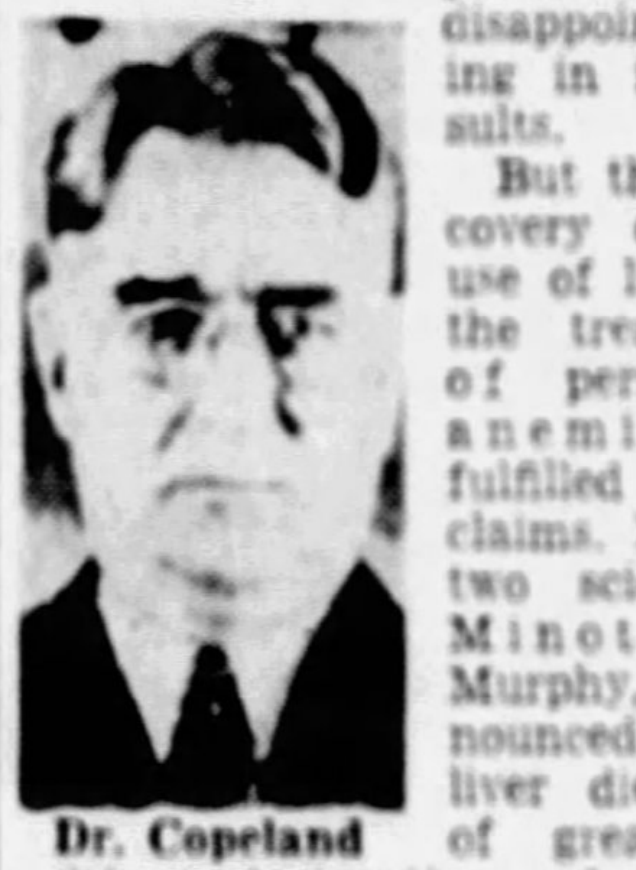
Cold weather and lack of perspiration, together with the dryness of steam-heated apartments, are responsible for chapped hands and complexions. Cold absorbs the natural oil of the skin, causes dead scales to fluff away more freely. At least once a day, face, hands and arms should receive a thorough oiling with some solid cream or liquid cosmetic.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Liver Eaten Daily Will Effect Cure for Anemia

What is at first hailed as "an important medical discovery" often causes a lot of uncalled for excitement. Too often it proves to be disappointing in its results.



Dr. Copeland

But the discovery of the use of liver in the treatment of pernicious anemia has fulfilled its claims. In 1926 two scientists, Minot and Murphy, announced that a liver diet was of great assistance in treating and correcting anemic conditions. Since then, thousands of afflicted persons have been returned to normal health by eating liver or taking liver extract.

Pernicious anemia is a disease of the blood, causing lack of "pep" and inability to work. The patient tires easily and upon exertion becomes short of breath.

The skin is usually of a yellowish lemon tint. The appetite is poor and the digestion faulty, and occasionally there is a feeling of faintness. In severe forms there is loss of weight as well as marked intestinal disturbances.

The symptoms are often confusing, but when the blood is examined the diagnosis is easily made. In the blood of persons suffering from pernicious anemia, there is a reduction in the number of red blood cells. Normally there are 3,000,000 to 4,500,000 red blood cells per cubic millimeter of blood. In pernicious anemia this number is reduced to as low as 500,000. The coloring matter of the blood is called the "hemoglobin." This substance is also decreased.

It is now known that one-half pound of liver eaten as part of the daily diet increases the number of red blood cells and the amount of hemoglobin. Of course the liver must be eaten daily.

Not only does this diet increase the hemoglobin and the number of red blood cells, but it improves the general health of the sufferer. Within three days, often sooner, there is new strength and an increase in the appetite. The shortness of breath, as well as other symptoms, gradually disappear.

Beef or calf's liver or the liver of other animals, may be used. It may be taken raw, or finely ground, or cooked in any way that makes it appeal to the taste. It is more easily digested when finely ground.

When fresh liver cannot be obtained, liver extract can be purchased. This is in powder form and may be sprinkled on the food or dissolved in water. If liver extract is used three to six vials, or the equivalent of one-half pound of fresh liver, should be taken daily.

Please do not purchase any liver extract which is not recommended by your physician. There are many commercial preparations, but not all are suitable.

I realize that a daily liver diet soon becomes tiresome. If you are on the diet, bear in mind that a cure can be accomplished only by eating this food daily.

Household Hints

A few drops of paraffin oil added to the water that is to be used for washing windows will discourage flies from settling on the glass.

Parsley will retain its flavor if it is washed in hot instead of cold water. This has an added advantage in that the parsley is much easier to chop.

Hot-water bottles should be washed out every month or so with cold water to which a little liquid ammonia had been added. This preserves the rubber and prevents it from becoming hard.

Dissolve a lump of sugar in the water when washing linoleum or oilcloth. A brilliant polish will result.

WINTER GOODS MOVE FASTER

The coldest weather of the winter is helping to some degree in moving winter merchandise, but is retarding the movement of spring wearing apparel, according to R. G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review. Distribution at wholesale is very quiet.

Business as a whole is averaging about the same in volume as last week and continues materially lower than a year ago. The demand for lumber is very slow with prices lower than for many years and building materials in general are moving at a low rate. Automobile sales have as yet shown no material improvement but demand for accessories is fair.

With average increases of about 10 per cent announced and A and B grades of window glass, orders increased rather sharply in that line, but as production of window glass has been in excess of shipments, there is not expected to be any increase in production at this time. The movement of plate glass is practically unchanged with the demand from automobile sources still much slower than anticipated.

There has been but little change in the collection situation, both wholesalers and retailers reporting the average still slow.

Cresson Patients Raise Movie Fund

Patients at the Cresson State Sanitarium, Cresson, Pa., faced with the prospect of being without their weekly movies, scraped together $300 needed for the purchase of new equipment through a cottage-to-cottage solicitation.

The films are lent to the sanitarium by the manager of a Cresson theater and have been a feature of the patients' entertainment for years.

EMBERS OF LOVE -:- Story of a Pretty Girl in Whom Burned The Flame of a Great Emotion -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXIII.

It was four months since Lily Lou had come to New York. Or was it four years? She was a frightened, panicky girl when she came. Now that she had so much more to be frightened and panicky about, she was quiet and poised. And much more beautiful.

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing, youngest of a large family, all of whom have sacrificed to give her singing lessons, comes to live in Oakland. She boards with her married sister, May, and her husband, Raymond, and works in an office in San Francisco. She meets Kentfield Sargent, third son of the Sargent whose name stands for steamships on the Pacific coast. Lily Lou becomes interested in young Sargent. Her sister, May, is furious. But in the meanwhile Lily Lou has realized that Ken is interested in someone else—Peggy Sage—a girl from his own circle. Health broken by study and work, Lily Lou goes home to rest. There Ken admits his love for Lily Lou. She returns to her work in San Francisco fearful that her love affair will peril her career. Ken and Lily Lou are married. Ken's mother tells Lily Lou Ken is not of age and threatens to have the marriage annulled. Anxious days follow. Lily Lou is told by Ken's father that marriage has been annulled. He gives her $500 and ticket to New York. Lily Lou arrives in New York. One job follows another until finally she gets a position playing for a dancing teacher. Then an opportunity comes for her to move into a new and better home. Letters and clippings from home inform her of Ken's engagement to her old rival, Peggy Sage. Lily Lou discovers she is going to become a mother. She loses her position playing for a dancing class and gets a much better one with a noted voice teacher.

Now Go On

Men had never paid her much attention in the old days. If they happened to give her a second look they looked again, impressed by her dark, flashing beauty. But she had been all too unaware of them, too wrapt in her secret, virginal thoughts.

Now she saw them, saw their interest, and her own leaped back. Not that she cared for any of them. Gwin, of course. . . . Gwin attracted her. Gwin attracted every woman. Sometimes she felt he was even more attracted to her, that he was waiting, biding his time, sure of himself, sure of her.

Her mother, sensing some crisis, wrote more frequently. Her letters were full of innocent warnings, that made Lily Lou, grown old and wise in four short months, want to laugh and cry at once.

"I am afraid that you will acquire a taste for so much luxury, and be discontented when you leave Mrs. Manchester's home," she wrote in her nice, ladylike script. "Remember that you come from plain people, dear, and that it is the plain, sweet things in life that endure."

LILY LOU'S FRIENDS

And again. . . . "Must it be opera, Lily Lou? Don't you think that your life would be cast in pleasanter places if you did oratorio instead? I am sure there are good, Christian people on the stage, but I cannot feel that they are just our kind."

Our kind . . . what was her kind now? Lily Lou didn't know. Her best friends were Gwin and Tony Schiarilli. Her best friends had always been girls before. And Gwin was married. It seemed funny to think of a married man as a friend, almost a chum, and not to know his wife. . . .

She had met her once. Mrs. Gwin, tall, ash-blonde, slightly faded, had reminded her uncomfortably of Ken's mother. The remembrance upset her so that she was ill at ease, and even the children, two fair, curly-headed, serious-faced little chaps in blue reefers, had regarded her coolly. And the next time they met Mrs. Gwin did not recognize her.

Schiarilli would seem strange to the folks at home, too. He was often extremely untidy—buttons off, shoes unpolished, flowing tie hanging limp over a faded shirt.

"He's in love with you, poor devil!" Gwin told her, and laughed.

DISCUSS PERSONALITIES

Lily Lou had been indignant at that. She didn't want Tony to be in love with her, and she couldn't imagine herself or anyone else in love with him. But she didn't want him laughed at.

"He'll be more famous than either of us!"

"[illegible] course he will. He's a [illegible]," Gwin chuckled. "What [illegible] to do with it?"

"Nothing. Only——"

"Only it excuses him for being bandy-legged, and baldheaded and—"

"How can you be so unkind?"

"I'm not unkind. It makes no difference what he looks like. In fact it's an asset to a violinist. And a conductor! I predict that Tony Schiarilli will be world famous. That limp is worth half a million dollars—"

"I thought musicians talked about music, and not personalities!"

"You were wrong. Did you think, by chance, that I choose you because of your voice?"

"Your voice is all right, child. It is a good voice. It's a perfect coloratura, and there are few perfect coloraturas—even fewer that keep their voices after a season or two. But! Do you know how many girls right here in this country have voices as good, perhaps better? And in France—and Germany — and Italy—"

"Yes and I'm just telling you that that isn't enough. Out of the hundreds who come to me and others, intent on careers, how many have the build, the beauty, the personality, even the intelligence and the pure animal strength to go through with it? The voice is such a small part of it? . . . Lily, you had so much, why couldn't you have looked ahead? Oh, it's a pity —a great pity—"

FULL REALIZATION

She knew what he meant. That it was a pity that she was going to have a baby. He knew of course. She had known that he thought of it sometimes, but he had never spoken of it before. Nobody had spoken of it.

She sat, with her head bent, staring at the frayed red velvet of the old chair, studying the intricate carving of the arms, memorizing each tiny detail, trying to pretend that she did not know what Gwin meant.

"When is it to be?" he asked her baldly.

"In April, I suppose," she answered. There was no use pretending. He'd just insist on making it plainer.

"Perhaps I can help. These things cost money. And there are arrangements to make—"

Lily Lou rose and opened the window, letting in a blast of icy air, and a flutter of wet snowdrops. "I have everything arranged," she said.

For the first time the full realization of what she must face gripped her. She hadn't let herself think. She had not really believed it. She had thought that something would happen . . . not a miracle of course, but something . . .

She was afraid she was going to be ill on the subway going home. It couldn't be so terrible to have a baby. It was being done every day, and the same women had two and three and four . . . look at Bess, back home . . . And she turned so pale that a woman sitting near her opened a large black satchel and offered her a bottle of smelling salts.

PREPARES TO LEAVE

The doorman looked at her strangely when she entered the apartment building. She thought that the elevator boy's glance was quizzical, too.

"I can't stay here," she thought, distractedly. "I've got to get away. Mrs. Manchester will notice — or Maxine. I couldn't stand it. Oh, I was a fool to leave my wedding ring behind and start out as Miss Lansing. Why, Maxine even asked me if I was married, and I said no, and I could have just as well have said . . ."

Things that she could have said went leaping through her tired brain. Things that Mrs. Manchester would say . . . Mrs. Manchester with her rescue homes, and sunshine nurseries, and all the rest of it . . .

Sadie, the maid, stood at the door rolling her large, dark eyes. "Were you going some place, Miss Lily Lou? Do you want me to help you pack?"

Stung with the realization of what she was doing, Lily Lou sank back on her heels, staring a little stupidly at the half-packed case. "No, I was just getting a few old things out of the way," she said, and thrust the bag back under the bed.

"Oh, all right, Miss Lily Lou."

When the girl had gone she dragged out the case, put the things back in her bureau. What was the use? Where could she go? Better to stay here . . . wait a while.

She didn't know it, but two days later she was to have it all to do over again.

"Yes, ma'am, Miss Lily Lou knew she was going all right," Sadie told her mistress after Lily Lou had said goodbye for the last time. "I saw her packing her things, far back as last Thursday."

She made up her mind to leave Mrs. Manchester's home.

ALL IN A DAY

By MARK HELLINGER

AS WE SAT around and chatted of this and that, Mr. Thomas Bodkin was reminded of a fight story for no good reason that anyone could determine. More, he went all the way back to the time that Dan Morgan, the fight manager, was trying to find what in those days was known as a white hope. It was, I imagine, around 1909.

A white hope, of course, was any white pugilistic gentleman who might be able to knock the colored Jack Johnson from the latter's seat on the heavyweight throne. According to Mr. Dan Parker, the most affable of the sporting experts, there were hundreds of fight managers—some very big and some very small—who were engaged in the same quest as Mr. Dan Morgan.

Mr. Morgan, however, was engaged in the enterprise on a rather large scale. He had established training quarters on a farm in the outskirts of Stamford, Conn., and it was to that spot that he sent some of the most ungainly bums who ever hoped to step into a prizefight ring.

He fed them and he trained them and he tried to hammer some sort of ring science into their thick skulls. As assistants he had Joe Jeanette and Black Bill, two colored fighters who had been through the mill for many years. They, too, were working for Dan Morgan on that farm—and if they often laughed to themselves over the dummies that were trying to be fighters, they said nothing about it to their boss.

It was just about that time that Mr. Morgan ran into Frank Moran, a young chap who really amounted to something in the ring a few years later. Frank had worked on President Roosevelt's yacht for some three years, and had often gone through gymnasium work with the highest official of the nation. As a result, he knew the President and his family very well, and they were genuinely fond of him.

Mr. Morgan watched Frank Moran work, and immediately saw in him a prospect for his farm. He asked Moran if he cared to go into training and pointed out the huge sums that could be made if he were able to win the heavyweight championship from Jack Johnson. The thing sounded good to Moran, and he agreed to go to Stamford.

"All right," said Morgan, "you leave tonight at 7. Joe Jeanette and Black Bill will meet you at the station and take you right over to the training quarters. I'll see you tomorrow. Good luck."

In due time Frank Moran arrived at his destination. He stepped from the train and found the two colored fighters waiting for him. They were both tired and indolent. To them Frank was just another bum who would have to be fed for a few days and then tossed out on his ear.

At that moment, Frank saw a familiar face. Standing only a few feet from him was a group of people that included Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. He removed his hat and raced over. The first lady of the land greeted him warmly, asked him what he was doing, wished him luck and asserted that she would most certainly give Frank's regards to the President.

"You boys know who that woman was?" he inquired.

"Well," said Frank proudly, "you should. The lady who greeted me so nicely just now was Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, the wife of the President of the United States."

Joe Jeanette and Black Bill exchanged startled glances. And Jeanette suddenly broke into a loud laugh.

IT WASN'T so very long ago that a certain motion picture star was scheduled to hit New York. This star specializes in western pictures and he gives the gals a definite thrill as he dashes over the landscape on his handsome steed.

His company wanted to pull a new type of press stunt and they finally called in Billy Grady, the Adonis of the theatrical press agents, for a suggestion. That's because Mr. Grady is recognized as one of the best suggestors on Broadway.

As usual, Mr. Grady was not at a loss. He even listened to the case this time before he said anything. And then he smiled.

"It's a cinch," he asserted. "Your Western star is coming in. You want a stunt. Why not hire that big white horse from the Ben Hur stable and send it over to the station?

"We'll pad the hoofs and send the animal right down to the train platform. Your star can jump on the horse right then and there and ride him right up the steps and out into the street. A good stunt and plenty of publicity. How does it strike you?"

"Don't be a chump," he muttered. "Don't you know that that guy has all he can do even to sit on a horse?"

* * *

THE PROPRIETOR of an arty speakeasy in the village took a liking to a penniless gent who was an alleged poet. The doughless one never wrote a line in his life, but he didn't have the price of a haircut—so he was forced to become either a violinist, a poet or a cabaret owner. He chose the poet's life.

For some two months, the speakeasy proprietor permitted the poet to sit around and lap up drinks with the paying customers. He was an affable fellow and he added tone to the intellectual gin mill. The only time a fuss was raised was when a customer accused the poet of stealing a glass of brandy and hiding it in his hair.

On Tuesday night, however, the poet was in his cups. He began to argue that it was Shakespeare who wrote "The Raven," and not Voltaire. So excited did he become, in fact, that glasses commenced to fly and tables were overturned.

The proprietor took a hand in the affair and commenced to bat people all over the joint. After the brawl was over, the poet found himself propelled in the direction of the door by his erstwhile pal, the owner of the cafe.

"I'm putting you out of here, you pest," he cried.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS -:- Junior Komic Club

Long before the doors were to open at the various theaters where the Junior Komic Club meetings are scheduled to be held this morning, the lobbies and sidewalks were jammed with happy youngsters. The children are always assured of good entertainment and many "surprises" at these meetings every Saturday.

The topic among the boys and girls was all about the "Popeye" cut-out which appeared in last Sunday's Sun-Telegraph for the members to color. At each of the chapters this morning some boy or girl became the proud owner of a dandy white woolly sweater with the Junior Komic Club emblem on it for sending in the best colored "Popeye" cut-out.

GIVEN BIG THRILL

They all got a big "kick" out of coloring "Popeye" and, in tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph, they'll find another cut-out to color, and next Saturday 19 more boys or girls will be the proud owner of Junior Komic Club sweaters.

In addition to the new cut-out there will also be another life-size comic mask which you can cut out and mount on heavy paper and wear. The one tomorrow is "Barney Google's" famous race horse, "Spark Plug." Cut this out and you will have loads of fun with "Sparkie."

Remember to have your Sunday Sun-Telegraph comic section ready tomorrow at 12:30 noon when "Uncle Bob" reads over radio station WCAE to his little niece, "Betty," and for all the members of the Junior Komic Club the big comic section you get with your Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

Vow to Be Humbled, With Hats Off, When Bankers Pass

"The whole trouble is with the people's frame of mind—they are suspicious and until they display confidence in the financial leadership of this nation they will have to endure the discomforts they have brought upon themselves."—Bankers' statement.

Dear Mister Banker—

I have been suspicious, since I lost my shirt,
But your statement shames me. . . .I'm sorry that I hurt
Gave me bogus foreign bonds for my hard earned dough.
I must try to see that I'm of course to blame,
For the bed I lie in—I hang my head in shame.
I'm sorry I was touchy—sorry I was sore—
I'll slip my earnings, henceforth, underneath your door.
I will never question. . . .I will never doubt
That financial leaders know what they're about.
I will never whimper, I must never sigh—

The State Must Aid

Another Special Session of the Legislature Can Scarcely Be Avoided—Comment on Local News.

*It is gratifying to learn that influential Pittsburgh*ers are considering the advisability of asking for another special session of the Legislature to provide relief for the unemployed. The need has become so much more urgent since the adjournment of the abortive session of a few months ago that the second meeting can scarcely be avoided.

The Supreme Court sat in Pittsburgh yesterday to hear arguments for and against the Talbot act appropriating $10,000,000 for poor relief. Even if the validity of the act should be upheld, the appropriation will be far from adequate. Moreover, no provision has been made for raising the $10,000,000, and it is asserted that the total estimated revenues for the biennium have already been fully appropriated.

The state cannot issue bonds except by amending the Constitution—a tedious and uncertain process. Gov. Pinchot proposed to sell bonds contingent on their eventual ratification; but it is doubtful if the plan would be practical. There seems to be no alternative, therefore, but to raise money by levying fresh taxes.

If fresh taxes must be levied, it is better that the Legislature should impose them than that the city and county should be left to their own resources. For the city and county have no other large source of revenue except the taxes on real estate, which is already taxed to the limit. The state has it in its power, on the other hand, to impose taxes on a variety of things.

At the recent session, unfortunately, neither Gov. Pinchot nor the members of the Legislature seemed to be able to think of any way of raising money except by taxing things already heavily taxed, such as gasoline and cigarets. An income tax was considered, but the Constitution forbids a graduated income tax. What is needed is a more equitable distribution of the tax burden than has heretofore been suggested.

Clyde L. King, Secretary of Revenue, delivered an address on "Pennsylvania's Tax System" yesterday, in which he pointed out some serious handicaps from which the commonwealth is now suffering in its attempts to collect revenue. Of especial interest to Western Pennsylvania were his remarks on the loss the state has sustained from the decline in the bituminous coal industry.

Before the World War Pennsylvania produced twice as much soft coal as West Virginia. Last year West Virginia produced 3,000,000 tons more than Pennsylvania. The loss of business to West Virginia, due largely to unfair freight rates, has had an adverse effect on the state's revenues and so is a matter of concern not only for the Pittsburgh district, but for the whole state.

*According to Dr. King, there has been a heavy mi*gration of capital from Pennsylvania in connection with the decline in the soft coal industry. He mentioned in his address other migrations of capital from the state, notably in connection with the decline in the textile industry in Philadelphia. Taxable values have declined with this migration.

The Greater Pennsylvania Council, created at the last regular session of the Legislature to advance the interests of the state, can address itself to no more important problem than the rehabilitation of our declining industries. The campaign that it has undertaken to get fair rates for shipments of Pittsburgh coal to the Great Lakes is altogether praiseworthy.

*The Pennsylvania Railroad has applied to the Re*construction Finance Corporation for a $55,000,000 loan, offering as security stock of its western lines. The money, together with $13,000,000 which the road will furnish itself, is to be spent on electrification of the eastern lines and also on terminal improvements at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Newark.

It is disappointing that the program, as published, makes no provision for work on the Pittsburgh terminal. But the railroad can offer as excuse for further delay here that the Public Service Commission has not rendered a decision on the protest of the public utilities companies against being required to re-locate their lines to make way for the new station.

Many weary months have passed since the Public Service Commission took the Pennsylvania Railroad case under advisement. The city law department has repeatedly asked when a decision might be expected, but has apparently been unable to obtain a definite answer. In the meanwhile work on an important improvement is held up, and many blocks of razed buildings remain an eyesore.

Though the Pennsylvania is not to make any local improvements with the money sought from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it will be to Pittsburgh's interest that the loan be granted; for the equipment with which its eastern lines are to be electrified will come from the East Pittsburgh works of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company.

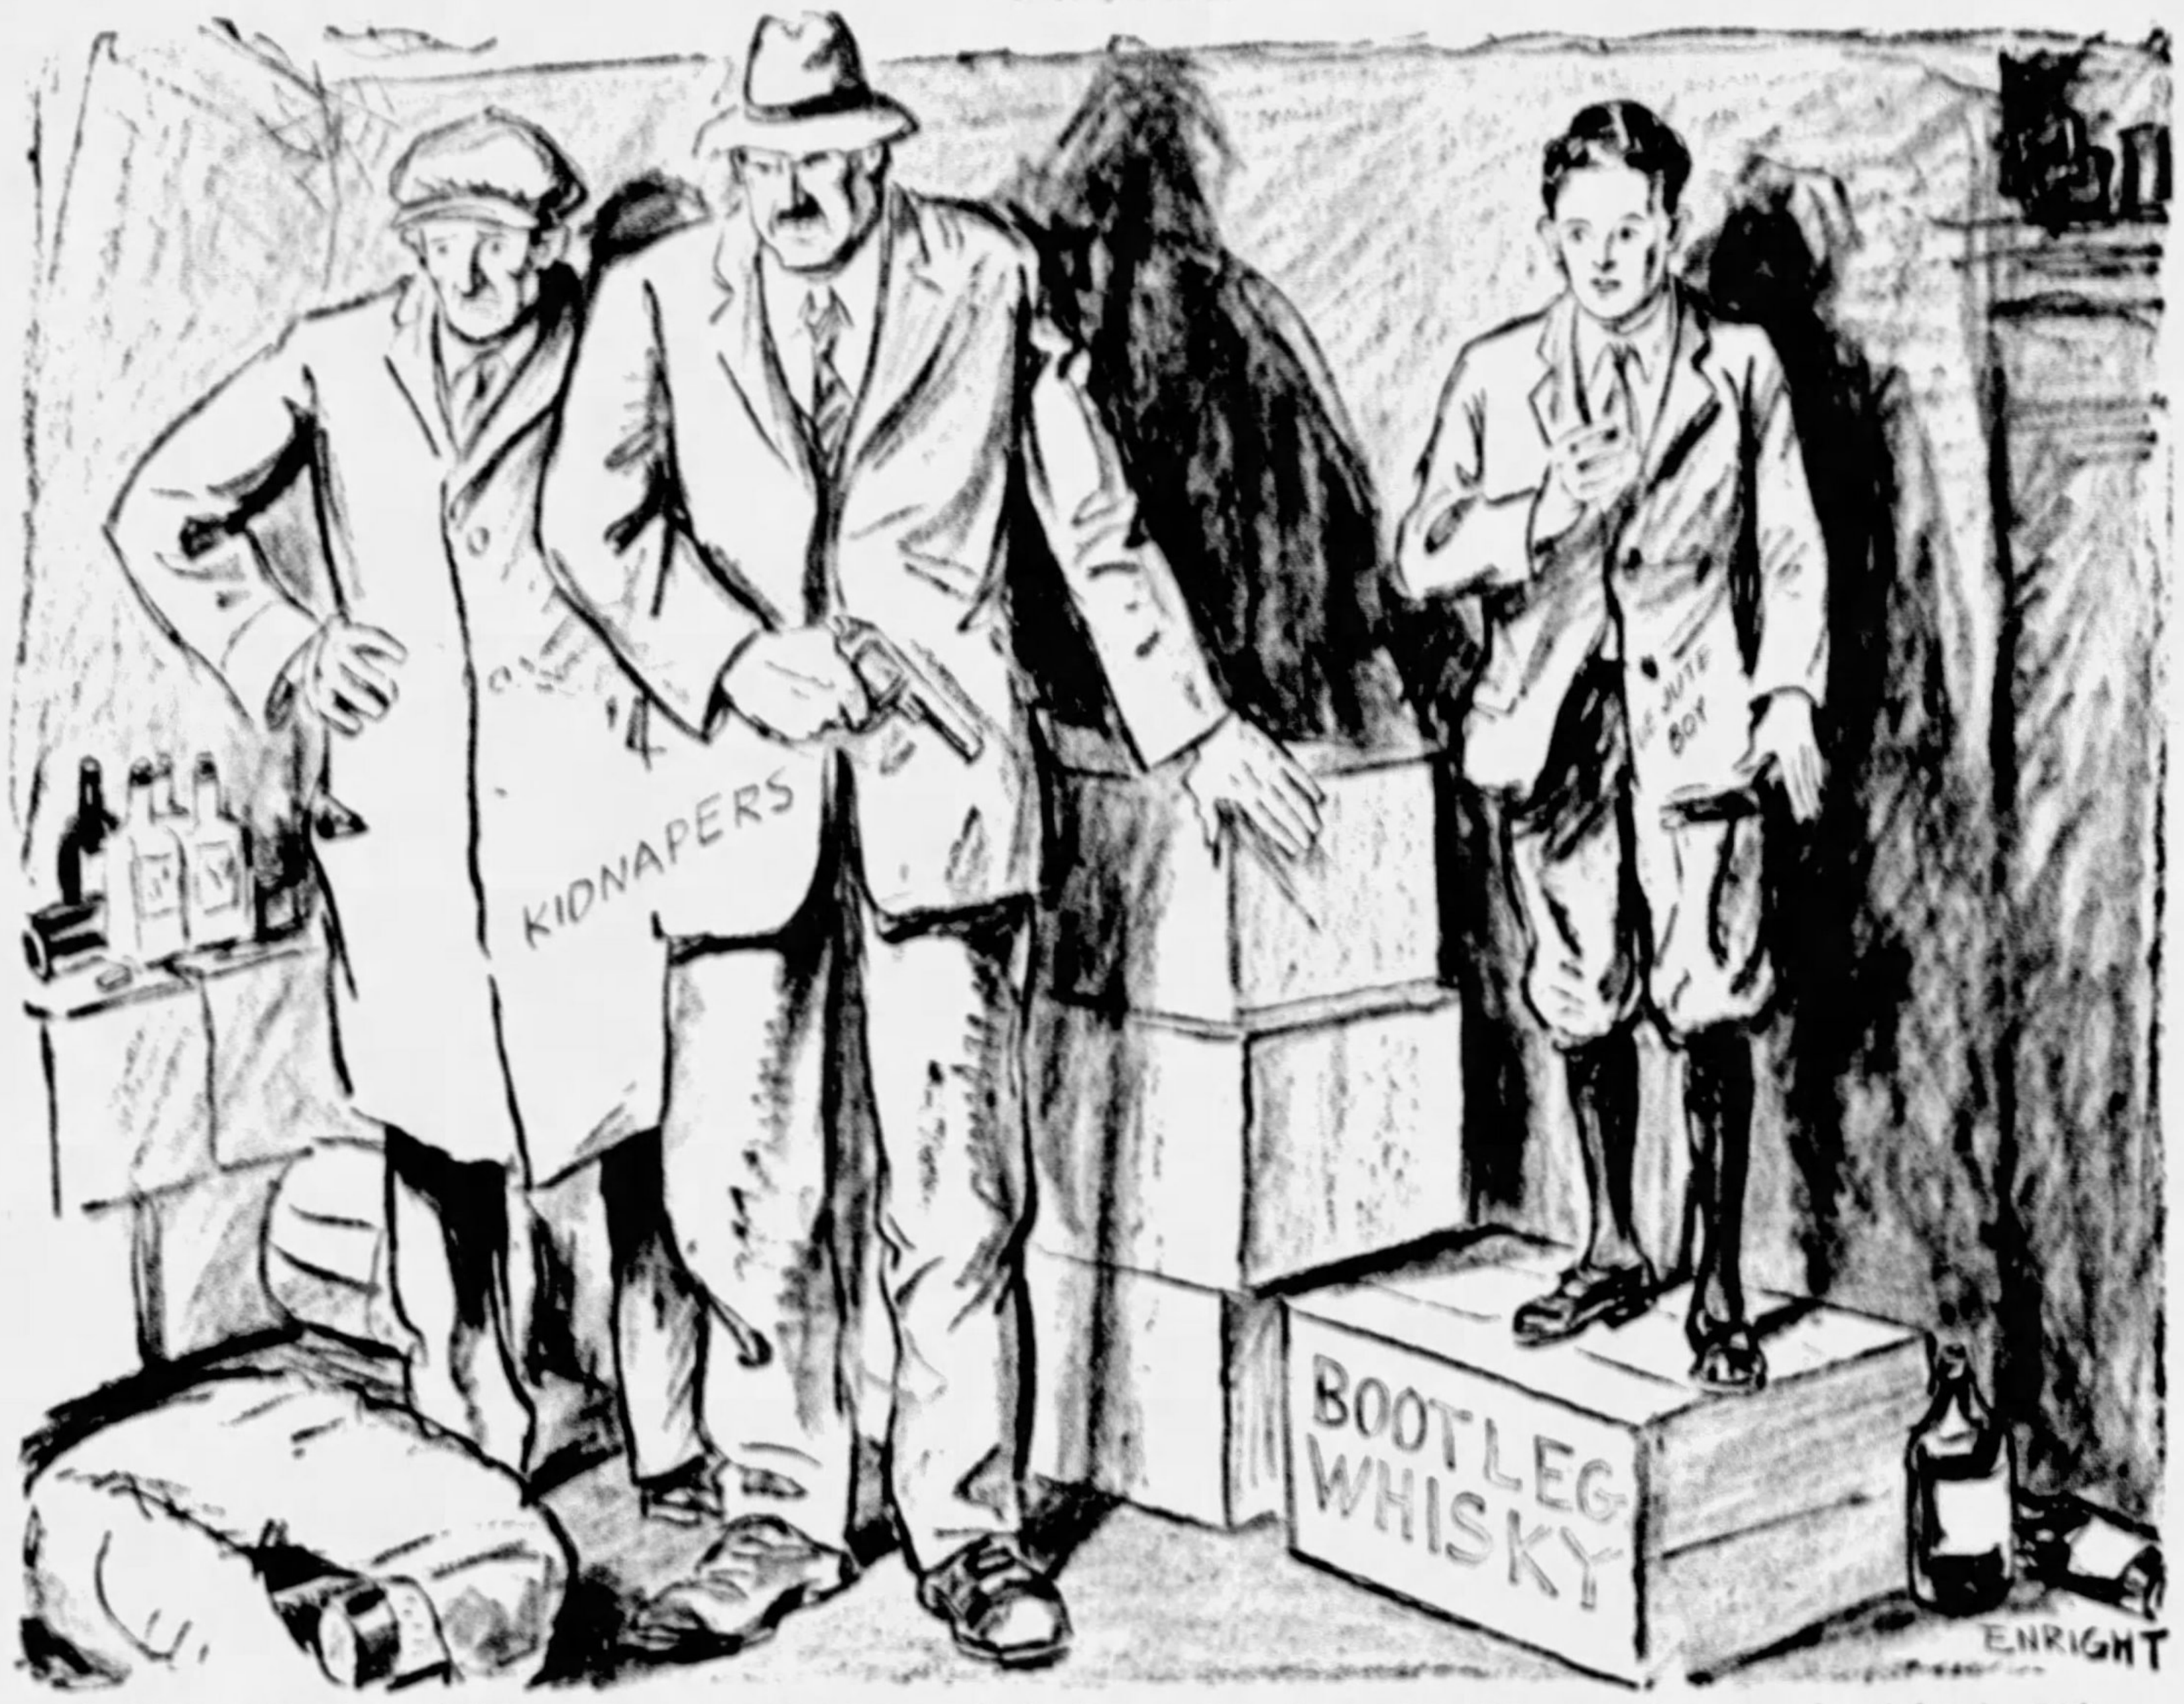
WHAT! No Connection?

(Copyright, 1932.)



A distinguished Anti-Saloon League official says it is outrageous to suggest any connection between prohibition and kidnaping.

Press dispatches describing the capture of the kidnapers and the recovery of the boy say: "The boy was standing on a case of whisky when the officers broke through an inside wall and found them."

Astronomers

And chart their ways in space,
The paths of Mercury and Mars
With eerie skill they trace.

They know the circuits of the suns,
Where stardust like a river runs
They count the worlds that pass.

No portion of their lore have I;
My being thrills with awe
When, eyes uplifted to the sky,
I watch the moving Law.

I watch the wheeling Might that sweeps
Across the deeps of space,
And vision there the Hand which keeps
The worlds in its embrace.

Astronomers are learned men
With knowledge deep and vast;
Yet I've no envy for them when

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 12.—Purely personal piffle: I cannot look formal even in full evening dress. Philip Barry writes the cleverest stage dialogue. I employ every possible dodge to evade telephone conversation and spice bean soup with tobasco until I pot out in a sweat.

A midnight group of chattering chorus girls fascinates me. In my entire life I never owned a satisfactory pen. I roar out loud at animated cartoons. Alice Longworth fits her niche in life better than any woman I know. The most placid newspaperman is Keats Speed.

I love to pronounce espionage. And think tranquil is one of the most beautiful of words. For no reason whatever, the Philadelphia Biddles annoy me. I am continually misplacing a sock and once swigged five gin fizzes in the hot Palm Beach sun, thinking they were lemonade. And did I put on an act!

My only art possession is a Rookwood vase! My father at 40 seemed terribly old. Several years older, I think myself youthful. The first poet I ever met was Berton Braley. Many who lost all lately present a charm they never had before. The Strand is the most interesting of all main stems.

I can draw a caricature of Arthur William Brown in two strokes. Herb Roth, dining with me once, ordered a minute steak for dessert. And ate it. I'm awed by athletic women and men with Van Dykes. Fellows excruciatingly comical in drinking days seem as flat today as a yesterday waffle.

I enjoy a good show a half-dozen times and saw "Sally" at least 20. Just to watch Leon Errol and Walter Catlett clown. A certain cafe attracts often because they serve spun sugar with ice cream. Stories of swamp life grip. Evans Wall writes the best.

My difficulty at teas is in getting rid of a frozen grin. All thrills are anticipatory. Realization means nothing. I have to ask my wife my exact age, destroy all chain good luck letters and my current stage love is Edna Best. I never saw anyone hit by an automobile.

* * *

Gallic effusiveness of Paris shop-keepers is hooey but how I fall for it! A clerk in the Grand Central zone thinks I'm Carl Van Vechten and talks about Harlem. I sign all intimate correspondence "Love and Kisses." The feel of cellophane makes me rub my fingers across my teeth. My finest cane is of solid amber, the gift of William Gaxton. The most unusual is a blackthorn, gift of the late Ben Hampton. Roxy is America's greatest showman.

* * *

The Broadwayiest crowd is in front of the Hotel Somerset, next to the Palace. An otherwise intelligent friend believes the world will come to an end this year. During a convalescence six years ago I lived for three months and wrote a daily article about New York without seeing an American newspaper. That or starve. Alfred Segal is the best all-around American reporter.

* * *

If the first page of a book doesn't interest it is rarely finished and I expect to be set upon by hoodlums in gas-house districts. Recently sat next to a behaviorist at dinner. He picked his teeth behind a napkin. Capt. Blancart, a liner captain, has the sternest expression. When caught in a fib I redden to the ears and laugh off key.

* * *

The friendliest radio voice is that of Maj. Bowes. Nothing makes me feel so sappy as to be asked to look someone in the eyes. Asked what wine I prefer I say Chablis Mouton 1902. I never tasted it, but read of it in a book. Sounds worldly. The most constructive critic I have is Charles B. Driscoll. Three persons who give me more ideas for this column than all others are Ray Long, Courtney Ryley Cooper and Irvin Cobb. Of all spiritual singers I enjoy Roland Hayes most. I've been out at night without my wife but twice in eight years.

* * *

I once loaned a program to J. P. Morgan in the next seat in a theater. Returning it he said, "Much obliged." Flustered, I replied, "I'm well, thanks." The most desolate spot was the public square at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, at twilight. I always turn to follow brunet ladies with white streaks in their hair.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Mary Ives wants me to write "a definition of a friend—an honest to goodness friend."

Nobody can do that for you, Mary. Friendship is like all else that is fine in life—like love or charity or honesty or faith—IT IS AS GREAT AS OUR INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY.

"A friend" is not a certain, definite sort of human being who conforms to a certain ideal standard of behavior; nor do friends "just happen" to us, through the mysterious hocus-pocus of love.

We create our friendships. Consciously or unconsciously we choose our friends to fit certain personal desires, to compensate for certain personal lacks; and so our friends are as noble as our own needs, as fine as our own desires.

How noble is your need? How fine is your desire? Why do you really want that friendship? What do you really expect from that friend?

At once a charming picture rushes through your mind. You see yourself and your friend enjoying a beautiful companionship, guiding each other through the difficult mazes of life, sympathizing with each other in suffering, inspiring each other to finer living.

Oh, yeah? But, honest now, is that the form your friendship will really take? Perhaps it is. There are friendships like that. There are people who are strong and wise enough to endure a sincere and stimulating friendship.

BUT MOST OF US DON'T WANT ANYTHING OF THE SORT.

We want someone who will coddle our weakness—
Condone our laziness—
Alibi our cussedness—
Flatter our vanity—
Listen to all our beats and bellikes—
Let us boss 'em to our heart's content—

IN SHORT, WHAT WE WANT IN A FRIEND IS A GOOD, RELIABLE YES-MAN, WHO WILL HELP US GO ON BEING THE SILLY, WEAK CREATURES WHICH WE ARE.

AND WE'D BE BEWILDERED, PEEVED AND BORED BY THE WISE, STRONG, RUTHLESSLY HONEST FRIENDS OF OUR DAY DREAMS.

Why do our friends fail us?

That's why WE PICK FRIENDS WHO WILL FAIL US. Our friends fail us because, in our secret hearts, we fail ourselves.

A true friend should understand, but never flatter.

He should sympathize with suffering, but never condone the weakness that caused that suffering.

He should love you and yet despise all that is weak in you, and expect you to do the same to him.

He should share himself with you, but never give himself to you nor allow you to possess him.

He should be himself, and let you be yourself. He should, even in the most intimate friendship, love freedom, give freedom, insist upon freedom—and be able to endure the responsibilities and loneliness which come to free souls.

A real friend should have these qualities. But have you these qualities, yourself? You dream about them, but do you practice them? Would you really enjoy living with them?

Friendship is what you make it. You get what you give. You find what you want. If your friendship is a failure, that failure starts in YOU.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

Isn't it possible, Mr. Boss, that in your methods of dealing with your employes, you completely unnerve them and make them so they are incapable of doing their best work?

By the strictness of your rules, the manner in which you censure them for errors, the unwarranted attacks you make on them for slight mistakes, you may make them more likely to fail in their work to rectify mistakes.

Jobs are hard to procure at present, and those who are employed are anxious enough to retain their places, so it is easy to arouse an employe to the point where he is not in full control of his mind.

There is great uneasiness among those who cause their superiors to be annoyed.

Unusual conditions of today should convince the employer that the best way to deal with his men is to give them credit at least for their efforts.

If errors are made and work not up to standard, in most cases it is not through carelessness or lack of interest.

The House and Tariff: Idle Money, Idle Men

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The tax bill to raise enough money over and above normal to meet the most appalling deficit in the Federal Treasury necessarily bears down hard on the people. It is impossible to raise almost a billion and a quarter in one year without imposing hardships on the citizen. But the House was not confronted with the problem of doing it or not doing it—there was no alternative.

The nation's credit, the value of its bonds are at stake. It seems only yesterday, when President Coolidge was solemnly telling Europe that it could not expect help from us until she had put her house in order by balancing her budgets. That is our job now.

And the House has probably done the best possible with the least possible hardship on the people. An effort may be made on the floor to raise as much as $350,000,000 of the amount required by the authorization of 2.75 per cent beer with a tax upon it. There is little probability that this will succeed. Prohibition has deprived us of an enormous revenue and if we want to keep it we must pay the price.

* * *

No General Revision Of the Tariff

We have received a number of letters asking why the Democratic House does not do something about the tariff. Something has been done; all that can be done with the President waiting with a veto of a general revision, and in view of the world conditions brought about largely by our stupid action in building our Chinese wall against trade.

It would have been stupid for the Democratic House to have undertaken a general revision. The Democrats have a small majority in the House, no majority in the Senate, and the President unquestionably would have vetoed any downward revision measure offered. We should have had weeks of partisan debate and turmoil ending in futility; and weeks devoted to the business crisis would have been lost.

There can be no general revision so long as the legislative and executive departments are politically opposed.

* * *

The Best That Can Be Done

Nor would a general revision have been practical under the circumstances, aside from that. We built a Chinese wall to exclude all other peoples from our markets, and other nations retaliated by building Chinese walls to exclude us from their own. So long as the tariff rates of other nations exclude us, it would be questionable policy for us to lower our own rates generally to admit their products to our markets.

The entire world is suffering from this passion for economic isolation which we introduced. We can act now only through negotiations looking to reciprocal action, and the President has refused to consider that method for the restoration of trade.

The House has passed a bill requesting the President to enter into negotiations for the removal of trade barriers, and to call an international conference to consider plans. This is the best that can be done under existing circumstances. It remains to be seen whether the Senate passes it, and, if so, whether the President vetoes it.

It is sheer nonsense to waste time passing measures, however meritorious, that are doomed to Mr. Hoover's veto from the start. The bill the Democratic House submitted is conservative and reasonable, and there is a possibility that the President will not veto it if it passes the Senate. But the House has acted.

* * *

Our Trouble Is Not Idle Money, But Idle Men

Some interesting observations were made this week when the President and others launched the anti-hoarding campaign over the radio. There is no excuse for hoarding now. Everything humanly possible has been done to safeguard the banks. There is no danger in that quarter now if ordinary judgment and common sense are used in choosing the depository.

But the purpose of the anti-hoarding campaign is not merely to get hidden money out of hiding, but to get it in use—to put money to work.

Senator Robinson said:

"If every unemployed dollar in the United States should be put to work tomorrow—made to perform the purpose for which it was intended—unemployment would be diminished, business would commence to revive, and confidence would take the place of fear."

Will getting the money out of hiding and into banks necessarily put it to work these days? Many of the banks are overflowing with idle money today. Businessmen have not been seeking loans for the expansion of their business. Money not in hiding but in banks has been idle because of the collapse of trade. And bankers can not be expected to put their money out on purely speculative enterprises. Only through the restoration of normal trade can prosperity be restored.

Is it possible that our statesmen cannot understand that our trouble is not idle money but idle men?

How to Restore Trade

There is a way to put millions of idle men to work on wages that will be spent in the restoration of trade.

Suppose the administration would condescend to consider a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan for the building of national highways that are needed?

The President says:

Because it is the "safest risk," the moment such a loan were offered the money in hiding not only would emerge but would go to work and put idle men to work. With these millions of idle men on wages, trade would have a chance. The restoration of trade would be a blessing to the merchant; and his demand on the factories for goods would put more idle men to work in the shops.

Which Is the 'Panacea'!

The administration is offering government bonds of small denominations to get money out of hiding; but Gen. Dawes stresses the point that this is not done to get money for the government that can be used in putting idle men to work. He merely proclaims the fact that government bonds will bring forth money. Why not bring forth more money in the same way to put men to work?

The President plays much with the word "panacea." Which is the "panacea"—the plan that brings forth money for the banks that business cannot use because there is no trade, or that which brings forth money to put men to work to restore normal trade?

Market-Minded Statesmanship

Never has any administration in this country resorted so much to "panaceas" and catch phrases to better economic conditions, while refusing to take the necessary steps to restore trade—on which prosperity depends.

Domestic trade is prostrate because millions in agriculture are ruined, and millions in industry are jobless; but any plan to restore these many millions to the purchasing class is called a "panacea."

You can make credit easy, and banks safe, and coax money from its hiding place, but you will never restore prosperity until something is done that promises a return to normal trade. The administration's "relief" measures are not concerned with this or with idle men. The Democratic House has proposed to the President that he begin negotiations for the restoration of the lost foreign markets—but will he sign it?
